Love's Labour's Lost

ACT FIRST

Scene One

[The King of Navarre's Park]

Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs,
And then grace us in the disgrace of death;
When, spite of cormorant devouring Time, 4
Th' endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge,
And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors,—for so you are, 8
That war against your own affections
And the huge army of the world's desires,—
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force:
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world; 12
Our court shall be a little academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longaville,
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me, 16
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here:
Your oaths are pass'd; and now subscribe your names,
That his own hand may strike his honour down 20
That violates the smallest branch herein.

13 academe: academy

19 subscribe: sign

If you are arm'd to do, as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd; 'tis but a three years' fast: 24
The mind shall banquet, though the body pine:
Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

Dum. My loving lord, Dumaine is mortified: 28
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die;
With all these living in philosophy. 32

Ber. I can but say their protestation over;
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years.
But there are other strict observances; 36
As, not to see a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there:
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside; 40
The which I hope is not enrolled there:
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day,—
When I was wont to think no harm all night 44
And make a dark night too of half the day,—
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.

O! these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep. 48

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.

Ber. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please.
I only swore to study with your Grace,

22 arm'd: ready

27 wits: faculties of the mind

28 mortified: dead so far as pleasures and passions are concerned

32 all these: i.e. love, wealth, pomp

43 wink of: close the eyes during

47 barren: fruitless, futile

26 pates: heads

38 there: i.e. in the schedule

50 an if: if

And stay here in your court for three years' space. 52

Long. You swore to that, Berowne, and to the rest.

Ber. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.

What is the end of study? let me know.

King. Why, that to know which else we should not know. 56

Ber. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

King. Ay, that is study's godlike recompense.

Ber. Come on then; I will swear to study so,

To know the thing I am forbid to know; 60

As thus: to study where I well may dine,

When I to feast expressly am forbid;

Or study where to meet some mistress fine,

When mistresses from common sense are hid; 34

Or, having sworn too hard-a-keeping oath,

Study to break it, and not break my troth.

If study's gain be thus, and this be so,

Study knows that which yet it doth not know. 68

Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite,

And train our intellects to vain delight.

Ber. Why, all delights are vain; but that most vain 72

Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain:

As, painfully to pore upon a book,

To seek the light of truth; while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look: 76

Light seeking light doth light of light beguile:

So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,

Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.

54 By yea and nay: i.e. by the most positive oath of affirmation and denial

57 common sense: ordinary sight or perception

52 feast; cf. n.

67, 68 Cf. n.

73 Cf. n.

76 his: its

77 beguile: deprive

79 light: i.e. sight

- Study me how to please the eye indeed, 80
 By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
 Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed,
 And give him light that it was blinded by.
 Study is like the heaven's glorious sun, 84
 That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:
 Small have continual plodders ever won,
 Save base authority from others' books.
 These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights, 88
 That give a name to every fixed star,
 Have no more profit of their shining nights
 Than those that walk and wot not what they are.
 Too much to know is to know nought but fame; 92
 And every godfather can give a name.
King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!
Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding!
Long. He weeds the corn, and still lets grow the weeding. 96
Ber. The spring is near, when green geese are a-breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reason nothing.
Ber. Something, then, in rime.
King. Berowne is like an envious sneaping frost 100
 That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
Ber. Well, say I am: why should proud summer boast
 Before the birds have any cause to sing?
 Why should I joy in any abortive birth? 104

80-83 Study me . . . blinded by; *cf. n.*86 Small: *little*91 wot: *know*97 green geese: *grass-fed goslings, i.e. simpletons*100 sneaping: *nipping*85 saucy: *bold*88-93 *Cf. n.*95 Proceeded; *cf. n.*99 *Cf. n.*101 infants: buds or flowers

At Christmas I no more desire a rose
Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;
But like of each thing that in season grows.

So you, to study now it is too late, 108

Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out: go home, Berowne: adieu!

Ber. No, my good lord; I have sworn to stay with you:

And though I have for barbarism spoke more 112

Than for that angel knowledge you can say,

Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn,

And bide the penance of each three years' day.

Give me the paper; let me read the same; 116

And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Ber. 'Item. That no woman shall come within a mile of my court.' Hath this been pro- 120 claimed?

Long. Four days ago.

Ber. Let's see the penalty. 'On pain of losing her tongue.' Who devised this penalty? 124

Long. Marry, that did I.

Ber. Sweet lord, and why?

Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.

[Ber.] A dangerous law against gentility!

'Item. If any man be seen to talk with a wo- 128 man within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise.'

106 new-fangled shows; cf. n.

This article, my liege, yourself must break; 132
 For well you know here comes in embassy
 The French king's daughter with yourself to speak—
 A maid of grace and complete majesty—
 About surrender up of Aquitaine 136
 To her decrepit, sick, and bed-rid father.
 Therefore this article is made in vain,
 Or vainly comes th' admired princess hither.
King. What say you, lords? why, this was quite forgot. 140
Ber. So study evermore is overshot:
 While it doth study to have what it would,
 It doth forget to do the thing it should;
 And when it hath the thing it hunteth most, 144
 'Tis won as towns with fire; so won, so lost.
King. We must of force dispense with this decree;
 She must lie here on mere necessity.
Ber. Necessity will make us all forsworn 148
 Three thousand times within this three years' space:
 For every man with his affects is born,
 Not by might master'd, but by special grace.
 If I break faith, this word shall speak for me: 152
 I am forsworn 'on mere necessity.'
 So to the laws at large I write my name: [Signs.]
 And he that breaks them in the least degree
 Stands in attainder of eternal shame. 156
 Suggestions are to others as to me;
 But I believe, although I seem so loath,
 I am the last that will last keep his oath.
 But is there no quick recreation granted? 160
King. Ay, that there is. Our court, you know, is haunted

147 lie: lodge mere: *absolute*151 special grace: *divine help*157 Suggestions: *temptations*150 affects: *affections, passions*156 in attainder: *convicted*160 quick: lively

With a refined traveller of Spain,
 A man in all the world's new fashion planted,
 That hath a mint of phrases in his brain; 164
 One who the music of his own vain tongue
 Doth ravish like enchanting harmony;
 A man of complements, whom right and wrong
 Have chose as umpire of their mutiny. 168
 This child of fancy, that Armado hight,
 For interim to our studies shall relate
 In high-born words the worth of many a knight
 From tawny Spain lost in the world's debate. 172
 How you delight, my lords, I know not, I;
 But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
 And I will use him for my minstrelsy.
Ber. Armado is a most illustrious wight, 176
 A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.
Long. Costard the swain and he shall be our sport;
 And, so to study, three years is but short.

Enter a Constable [Dull] with Costard with a Letter.

Const. Which is the duke's own person? 180
Ber. This, fellow. What wouldst?
Const. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his Grace's tharborough: but I would see his own person in flesh and blood. 184
Ber. This is he.
Const. Signior Arm—Arm—commends you.
 There's villainy abroad: this letter will tell you more. 188

165 who: whom

169 hight: is called

172 debate: warfare

177 fire-new: brand-new

182 reprehend: i.e. represent

183 tharborough: third borough (constable)

167 complements: accomplishments

171 high-born: lofty

175 for my minstrelsy: as my minstrel

180 duke's: i.e. king's

Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Ber. How low soever the matter, I hope in 192
God for high words.

Long. A high hope for a low heaven: God grant us patience!

Ber. To hear, or forbear laughing? 196

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.

Ber. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness. 200

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.

Ber. In what manner? 204

Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those three: I was seen with her in the manorhouse, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, 208 is, in manner and form following. Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman, for the form,—in some form.

Ber. For the following, sir? 212

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; and God defend the right!

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Ber. As we would hear an oracle. 216

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh.

189 contempts: i.e. contents

191 magnificent: showy, vainglorious

194 low heaven: i.e. moderate pleasure

203 with the manner (mainour): in the act

207 form: bench

213 correction: punishment

King. [Reads.] 'Great deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's 220 earth's God, and body's fostering patron,—'

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. [Reads.] 'So it is,—'

Cost. It may be so; but if he say it is so, he 224 is, in telling true, but so.—

King. Peace!

Cost. Be to me and every man that dares not fight. 228

King. No words!

Cost. Of other men's secrets, I beseech you.

King. [Reads.] 'So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black-op- 232 pressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when?
About the sixth hour; when beasts most graze, 236 birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper: so much for the time when. Now for the ground which;
which, I mean, I walked upon: it is ycleped 240 thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that most obscene and preposterous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebon-coloured ink, which here thou 244 viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest. But to the place where, it standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curiousknotted garden. There did I see that low-spirited 248 swain, that base minnow of thy mirth,—'

Cost. Me?

240 ycleped: called

247 curious-knotted: fancifully laid out in intricate beds

King. [Reads.] 'that unlettered small-knowing soul,—'

Cost. Me?

252

King. [Reads.] 'that shallow vessel,—'

Cost. Still me?

King. [Reads.] 'which, as I remember, hight Costard,—'

256

Cost. O me!

King. [Reads.] 'sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, with—with,—O! with—but with this I 260 passion to say wherewith,—'

Cost. With a wench.

King. [Reads.] 'with a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet under- 264 standing, a woman. Him I,—as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on,—have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet Grace's officer, Anthony Dull; a man of good 268 repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation.'

Dull. Me, an 't shall please you; I am Anthony Dull.

King. [Reads.] 'For Jaquenetta,—so is the weaker vessel called which I apprehended with the 272 aforesaid swain,—I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty, 276

Don Adriano de Armado.'

Ber. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

258 sorted: associated

259 continent: i.e. containing a summary of offenses

261 passion: grieve

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this? 280

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench.

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it. 284

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment to be taken with a wench.

Cost. I was taken with none, sir: I was taken with a damsel. 288

King. Well, it was proclaimed 'damsel.'

Cost. This was no damsel neither, sir: she was a virgin.

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed 'virgin.' 293

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity: I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir. 296

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence:
you shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton 300 and porridge.

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper.

My Lord Berowne, see him deliver'd o'er:

And go we, lords, to put in practice that 304

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumaine.]

Ber. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat,

These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn.

Sirrah, come on. 308

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir: for true it is 284 marking of: paying attention to

288 damsel: a young unmarried woman of good birth

300 mutton: slang for 'loose woman'

306 lay: wager

I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; 312 and till then, sit thee down, sorrow! Exeunt.

Scene Two

[The Same]

Enter Armado and Moth his Page.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same 4 thing, dear imp.

Boy. No, no; O Lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal? 8

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior.

Arm. Why tough senior? why tough senior?

Boy. Why tender juvenal? why tender juvenile? 12

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender. 16

Boy. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty, and apt.

Boy. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and my 20 saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

5 imp: child

16 nominate: call

14 congruent epitheton: suitable epithet

17 appertinent: appropriate

Boy. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt? 24

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick.

Boy. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Boy. I will praise an eel with the same 28 praise.

Arm. What! that an eel is ingenious?

Boy. That an eel is quick.

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers: 32
thou heat'st my blood.

Boy. I am answered, sir.

Arm. I love not to be crossed.

Boy. [Aside.] He speaks the mere contrary: 36 crosses love not him.

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the duke.

Boy. You may do it in an hour, sir. 40

Arm. Impossible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fitteth the spirit of a tapster. 44

Boy. You are a gentleman and a gamester, sir.

Arm. I confess both: they are both the varnish of a complete man. 48

Boy. Then, I am sure you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar do call three. 52

Arm. True.

Boy. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study?
Now, here is three studied, ere ye'll thrice wink;

and how easy it is to put 'years' to the word 56
'threc,' and study three years in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Boy. To prove you a cipher. 60

Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love; and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver 64 me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new devised curtsy. I think scorn to sigh: methinks I should out- 68 swear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: what great men have been in love?

Boy. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules! More authority, 72
dear boy, name more; and, sweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Samson, master: he was a man of good carriage, great carriage, for he carried the town- 76 gates on his back like a porter; and he was in love.

Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love 80
too. Who was Samson's love, my dear Moth?

Boy. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the four, or the three, or the 84
two, or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion.

Boy. Of the sea-water green, sir.

58 dancing horse; cf. n.

64 humour of affection: caprice of being in love

68 think: think it

59 figure: illustration

83 complexion: disposition; cf. n.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions? 88

Boy. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green indeed is the colour of lovers; but to have a love of that colour, methinks 92 Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so, sir, for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and 96 red.

Boy. Most maculate thoughts, master, are masked under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant. 100

Boy. My father's wit, and my mother's tongue, assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty and 104 pathetic!

Boy. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known,
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown: 108
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheeks possess the same
Which native she doth owe. 112

A dangerous rime, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballet, boy, of the King and the Beggar? 116

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a ballet some three ages since; but I think now

94 affected: liked
95 green wit; cf. n.
112 native: naturally
115 ballet: ballad

wit: understanding owe: own, possess

104 pathetic: touching
115, 116 Cf. n.
118 ages: generations

'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune. 120

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational 124 hind Costard: she deserves well.

Boy. [Aside.] To be whipped; and yet a better love than my master.

Arm. Sing, boy: my spirit grows heavy in 128 love.

Boy. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing. 132

Boy. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Clown [Costard], Constable [Dull], and Wench [Jaquenetta].

Const. Sir, the duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe: and you must suffer him to take no delight nor no penance, but a' must fast three 136 days a week. For this damsel, I must keep her at the park; she is allowed for the day-woman.
Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing. Maid! 140

Maid. [Jaq.] Man?

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge.

Maid. That's hereby.

Arm. I know where it is situate. 144

Maid. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With that face?

122 digression: deviation from my nature, i.e. debasement

124 rational: reasoning, i.e. not stupid

136 a': he

138 allowed: approved of

127 love: lover

day-woman: dairy-woman

Arm. I love thee. 148

Maid. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so farewell.

Maid. Fair weather after you!

Const. Come, Jaquenetta, away! 152

Exeunt [Dull and Jaquenetta].

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clow. Well, sir, I hope, when I do it, I shall do it on a full stomach. 156

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished.

Clow. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain: shut him up. 160

Boy. Come, you transgressing slave: away!

Clow. Let me not be pent up, sir: I will fast, being loose.

Boy. No, sir; that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison. 164

Clow. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see—

Boy. What shall some see? 168

Clow. Nay, nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and therefore I will say nothing: I thank God I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet. 172

Exit [Costard; also Moth].

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn,—which is a great argument of false- 176 hood,—if I love. And how can that be true love which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; 180 Love is a devil: there is no evil angel but Love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength; yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupid's butt-shaft 184 is too hard for Hercules' club, and therefore too much odds for a Spaniard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not, the duello he regards 188 not: his disgrace is to be called boy, but his glory is to subdue men. Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me some extemporal 192 god of rime, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit; write, pen; for I am for whole volumes in folio.

ACT SECOND

Scene One

[The King of Navarre's Park. A Pavilion and Tents at a distance]

Enter the Princess of France, with three attending Ladies [Rosaline, Maria, Katharine,] and three Lords [Boyet and attending Lords].

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits:

Consider whom the king your father sends,
To whom he sends, and what's his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem, 4
To parley with the sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitaine, a dowry for a queen. 8
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace
As Nature was in making graces dear,
When she did starve the general world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you. 12

Prin. Good Lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,

Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgment of the eye,
Not utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues. 16
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker: good Boyet, 20
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame

1 dearest: best
16 utter'd: sold

7 Navarre: King of Navarre chapmen's: shopmen's

plea: suit

Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
 Till painful study shall outwear three years,
 No woman may approach his silent court: 24
 Therefore to's seemeth it a needful course,
 Before we enter his forbidden gates,
 To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
 Bold of your worthiness, we single you 28
 As our best-moving fair solicitor.
 Tell him, the daughter of the King of France,
 On serious business, craving quick dispatch,
 Importunes personal conference with his Grace. 32
 Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
 Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

Exit Boyet.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so. 36
 Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
 That are vow-fellows with this virtuous duke?

[A] Lord. Longaville is one.

Prin.

Know you the man?

1. Lad. [Maria]. I know him, madam: at a marriage feast, 40

Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heir
 Of Jacques Falconbridge solemnized,
 In Normandy saw I this Longaville.

A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd; 44
 Well fitted in the arts, glorious in arms:
 Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
 The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,—
 If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil,— 48
 Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;

25 to's: to us

29 best-moving fair: persuasive and just

38 duke: i.e. king (cf. I. i. 180, I. ii. 134)

49 blunt: harsh

Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills
It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; is 't so? 52

1. Lad. They say so most that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?

2. Lad. [Kath.] The young Dumaine, a well-accom-plish'd youth, 56

Of all that virtue love for virtue lov'd:
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill,
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit. 60
I saw him at the Duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.

3. Lad. [Ros.] Another of these students at that time 64

Was there with him, if I have heard a truth.
Berowne they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal. 68
His eye begets occasion for his wit;
For every object that the one doth catch
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor, 72
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse. 76

Prin. God bless my ladies! are they all in love,

50 still: ever

57 Of: by

59 shape: form, or figure

63 report: testimony; cf. n.

74 Cf. n.

That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

[A] Lord. Here comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord? 80

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his competitors in oath
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,
Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt; 84
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house. 88

Enter Navarre, Longaville, Dumaine, and Berowne.

Here comes Navarre.

King. Fair princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. 'Fair' I give you back again; and
'welcome' I have not yet: the roof of this court 92 is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome, then: conduct me thither. 96

King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our Lady help my lord! he'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else. 100

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.

82 competitors: associates

92 roof of this court: i.e. the heaven

83 address'd: ready

103 Where: whereas

I hear your grace hath sworn out house-keeping: 104
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold:
To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me. 108

Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit. [Gives a paper.]
King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner that I were away, 112
For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay.

Ber. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ros. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ber. I know you did.

Ros. How needless was it then 116

To ask the question!

Ber. You must not be so quick.

Ros. 'Tis 'long of you that spur me with such questions.

Ber. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.

Ros. Not till it leave the rider in the mire. 120

Ber. What time o' day?

Ros. The hour that fools should ask.

Ber. Now fair befall your mask!

Ros. Fair fall the face it covers! 124

Ber. And send you many lovers!

Ros. Amen, so you be none.

Ber. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate 128

The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;

Being but the one half of an entire sum

Disbursed by my father in his wars.

But say that he, or we,—as neither have,— 132

104 sworn out house-keeping: forsworn hospitality

110 suddenly: quickly

118 'long: along, because

123 fair befall: mercy on

130 Cf. n.

Receiv'd that sum, yet there remains unpaid
 A hundred thousand more; in surety of the which,
 One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
 Although not valu'd to the money's worth. 136
 If then the king your father will restore
 But that one half which is unsatisfied,
 We will give up our right in Aquitaine,
 And hold fair friendship with his majesty. 140
 But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
 For here he doth demand to have repaid
 A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
 On payment of a hundred thousand crowns, 144
 To have his title live in Aquitaine;
 Which we much rather had depart withal,
 And have the money by our father lent,
 Than Aquitaine, so gelded as it is. 148
 Dear princess, were not his requests so far
 From reason's yielding, your fair self should make
 A yielding 'gainst some reason in my breast,
 And go well satisfied to France again. 152

Prin. You do the king my father too much wrong,
 And wrong the reputation of your name,
 In so unseeming to confess receipt
 Of that which hath so faithfully been paid. 156

King. I do protest I never heard of it;
 And if you prove it, I'll repay it back
 Or yield up Aquitaine.

Prin. We arrest your word.
 Boyet, you can produce acquittances 160
 For such a sum from special officers
 Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.

146 depart withal: part with

151 A . . . reason: a rather unreasonable yielding

155 unseeming: seeming not

148 gelded: maimed

159 arrest: take up, challenge

Boyet. So please your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound: 164
To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me: at which interview
All liberal reason I will yield unto.
Meantime, receive such welcome at my hand 168
As honour, without breach of honour, may
Make tender of to thy true worthiness.
You may not come, fair princess, in my gates;
But here without you shall be so receiv'd, 172
As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denied fair harbour in my house.
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell:
To-morrow shall we visit you again. 176

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your Grace!

King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place!
Exit [King].

Ber. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart.

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it. 180

Ber. I would you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Ber. Sick at the heart.

Ros. Alack! let it blood. 184

Ber. Would that do it good?

Ros. My physic says, 'ay.'

Ber. Will you prick't with your eye?

Ros. No point, with my knife. 188

Ber. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Ber. I cannot stay thanksgiving.

Exit [i.e. Retires].

Dum. [Advancing.] Sir, I pray you a word: what lady is that same? 192

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, Katharine her name.

Dum. A gallant lady. Monsieur, fare you well.

Exit.

Long. I beseech you a word: what is she in the white?

Boyet. A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light. 196

Long. Perchance light in the light. I desire her name.

Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to desire that were a shame.

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard. 200

Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended.

She is an heir of Falconbridge.

Long. Nay, my choler is ended. 204

She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be.

Exit Longaville.

Enter Berowne [i.e. he advances].

Ber. What's her name, in the cap?

Boyet. Rosaline, by good hap. 208

Ber. Is she wedded or no?

Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.

Ber. You are welcome, sir. Adieu.

Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you. 212

Exit Berowne.

Mar. That last is Berowne, the merry madcap lord:
Not a word with him but a jest.

Boyet. And every jest but a word.

Prin. It was well done of you to take him at his word.

Boyet. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board. 216

Kath. Two hot sheeps, marry!

Boyet. And wherefore not ships?
No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips.

Kath. You sheep, and I pasture: shall that finish the jest?

Boyet. So you grant pasture for me.

[Offering to kiss her.]

Kath. Not so, gentle beast. 220
My lips are no common, though several they be.

Boyet. Belonging to whom?

Kath. To my fortunes and me.

Prin. Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree.

This civil war of wits were much better us'd 224
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 'tis abus'd.

Boyet. If my observation,—which very seldom lies,
By the heart's still rhetoric disclosed with eyes,— Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected. 228

Prin. With what?

Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle affected.

Prin. Your reason.

 His heart, like an agate, with your print impress'd,
 Proud with his form, in his eye pride express'd.
 His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see, 236
 Did stumble with haste in his eyesight to be;
 All senses to that sense did make their repair,
 To feel only looking on fairest of fair:
 Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye, 240
 As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy;
 Who, tend'ring their own worth from where they were glass'd,
 Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd.
 His face's own margent did quote such amazes, 244
 That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.
 I'll give you Aquitaine, and all that is his,
 An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss.
 Prin. Come to our pavilion: Boyet is dispos'd. 248 Boyet. But to speak that in words which his eye hath disclos'd.
 I only have made a mouth of his eye,
 By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.
 Ros. Thou art an old love-monger, and speak'st skilfully. 252
 Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him.
 Kath. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.
 Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches?
 Ros. No.

ACT THIRD

Scene One

[The King of Navarre's Park]

Enter Braggart [Armado] and his Boy [Moth].

Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. [Singing.] Concolinel,—

Arm. Sweet air! Go, tenderness of years; 4 take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither; I must employ him
in a letter to my love.

Moth. Master, will you win your love with a 8
French brawl?

Arm. How meanest thou? brawling in French?

Moth. No, my complete master; but to jig off 12 a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids, sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat, [as] if you swallowed love by singing 16 love, sometime through [the] nose, as if you snuffed up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin belly-douplet like a 20 rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket like a man after the old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours, these be- 24 tray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note,—do you note? men,—that most are affected to these.

Arm. How hast thou purchased this ex- 28 perience?

Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O—but O,—

Moth. 'The hobby-horse is forgot.' 32

Arm. Callest thou my love 'hobby-horse'?

Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love perhaps a hackney. But have you forgot your love? 36

Arm. Almost I had.

Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.

Arm. By heart, and in heart, boy.

Moth. And out of heart, master: all those 40 three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove?

Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you love 44 her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her. 48

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

35 hackney: i.e. loose woman

25 nice: coy

32 Cf. n.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain: he must carry 52 me a letter.

Moth. A message well sympathized: a horse to be ambassador for an ass.

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou? 53

Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited. But I go.

Arm. The way is but short: away!

Moth. As swift as lead, sir. 60

Arm. The meaning, pretty ingenious?
Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow?

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.

Arm. I say, lead is slow.

Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so. 64
Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?

Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!

He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he:
I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth. Thump, then, and I flee. 68
[Exit.]

Arm. A most acute juvenal; volable and free of grace!

By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face:
Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.

My herald is return'd. 72

Enter Page [Moth] and Clown [Costard].

Moth. A wonder, master! here's a costard broken in a shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle: come, thy l'envoy;
begin.

Cost. No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve tain: no l'envoy, no l'envoy: no salve, sir, but a plantain.

Arm. By virtue, thou enforcest laughter; thy silly thought, my spleen; the heaving of my 80 lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling: O!
pardon me, my stars. Doth the inconsiderate take salve for l'envoy, and the word l'envoy for a salve? 84

Moth. Do the wise think them other? is not l'envoy a salve?

Arm. No, page: it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain

Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been sain. 88
I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three.

There's the moral. Now the l'envoy. 92

Moth. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three. 96

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy. 100

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee
Were still at odds, being but three.

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four. 104

that's flat.

Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be fat. 108
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.
Let me see: a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a costard was broken in a shin. 112

Then call'd you for the l'envoy.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain: thus came your argument in;

Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought;
And he ended the market. 116

Arm. But tell me: how was there a costard broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth: I will 120 speak that l'envoy:

I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,
Fell over the threshold and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter. 124

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O! marry me to one Frances: I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this. 128

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfreedoming thy person: thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true, and now you will be my pur- 132
gation and let me loose.

Moth. Like the sequel, I. Signior Costard, adieu. Exit.

Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!—

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O that's the Latin word for three far- 144 things: three farthings, remuneration. 'What's the price of this inkle?' 'One penny.' 'No, I'll give you a remuneration': why, it carries it. Remuneration! why, it is a fairer name than 148 French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Berowne.

Ber. O my good knave Costard, exceedingly well met! 152

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Ber. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, halfpenny farthing. 156

Ber. Oh! Why then, three-farthing-worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship. God be wi' you!

Ber. O stay, slave; I must employ thee. 160
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Ber. O, this afternoon. 164

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir. Fare you well.

Ber. O, thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Ber. Why, villain, thou must know first. 168

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Ber. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this: 172

The princess comes to hunt here in the park,

And in her train there is a gentle lady:

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,

And Rosaline they call her: ask for her 176

And to her white hand see thou do commend

This seal'd-up counsel. [Gives him a shilling.] There's thy guerdon: go.

Cost. Gardon, O sweet gardon! better than remuneration; a 'leven-pence farthing better. 180

Most sweet gardon! I will do it, sir, in print.

Gardon! remuneration! Exit.

Ber. O! And I,—

Forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip; 184

A very beadle to a humorous sigh;

A critic, nay, a night-watch constable,

A domineering pedant o'er the boy,

 And I to be a corporal of his field,
 And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop!
 What! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!
 A woman that is like a German clock, 200
 Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,
 And never going aright, being a watch,
 But being watch'd that it may still go right!
 Nay, to be perjur'd, which is worst of all; 204
 And, among three, to love the worst of all;
 A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
 With two pitch balls stuck in her face for eyes.
 Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed, 208
 Though Argus were her eunuch and her guard.
 And I to sigh for her! to watch for her!
 To pray for her! Go to: it is a plague
 That Cupid will impose for my neglect 212
 Of his almighty dreadful little might.
 Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, groan:
 Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.

ACT FOURTH

Scene One

[The King of Navarre's Park]

Enter the Princess, a Forester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Prin. Was that the king, that spurr'd his horse so hard

Against the steep uprising of the hill?

Boyet. I know not; but I think it was not he.

Prin. Whoe'er a' was, a' show'd a mounting mind. 4
Well, lords, to-day we shall have our dispatch;
On Saturday we will return to France.

Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in? 8

For. Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;
A stand where you may make the fairest shoot.

Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,
And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot. 12

For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.

Prin. What, what? first praise me, and again say no?
O short-liv'd pride! Not fair? alack for woe!

For. Yes, madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now: 16
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here, good my glass.—[Gives money.] Take this for telling true:

Fair payment for foul words is more than due.

For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit. 20

Prin. See, see! my beauty will be sav'd by merit.

9 coppice: thicket
17 fair: beauty
20 inherit: possess

10 stand: hunter's station
18 my glass: mirror, i.e. the Forester
21 merit: good deeds

O heresy in fair, fit for these days!
 A giving hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.
 But come, the bow: now mercy goes to kill, 24
 And shooting well is then accounted ill.
 Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
 Not wounding, pity would not let me do 't;
 If wounding, then it was to show my skill, 28
 That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.
 And out of question so it is sometimes,
 Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
 When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part, 32
 We bend to that the working of the heart;
 As I for praise alone now seek to spill
 The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill.

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-sover-eighty 36

Only for praise' sake, when they strive to be Lords o'er their lords?

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may afford
 To any lady that subdues a lord. 40

Enter Clown [Costard].

Boyet. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.

Cost. God dig-you-den all! Pray you, which is the head lady?

Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the 44 rest that have no heads.

Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?

Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.

Cost. The thickest, and the tallest: it is so; truth is truth. 48

22 heresy; cf. n.

30 out of question: undoubtedly

32 outward part: extraneous quality

41 commonwealth: i.e. common people

42 dig-you-den: give you good evening

23 giving: generous

36 curst: shrewish

48 The thickest, etc.: cf. n

An your waist, mistress, were as slender as my wit,
One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit.

Are not you the chief woman? you are the thickest here.

Prin. What's your will, sir? what's your will? 52

Cost. I have a letter from Monsieur Berowne to one Lady Rosaline.

Prin. O thy letter, thy letter! He's a good friend of mine.

Stand aside, good bearer. Boyet, you can carve;

Break up this capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serve.— 56

This letter is mistook; it importeth none here:

It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, I swear.

Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet. [Reads.] 'By heaven, that thou art fair, 60 is most infallible; true, that thou art beauteous; truth itself, that thou art lovely. More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroical vas- 64 sal. The magnanimous and most illustrate king Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon, and he it was that might rightly say veni, vidi, vici; which to 68 anatomize in the vulgar—O base and obscure vulgar!—videlicet, he came, saw, and overcame:
he came, one; saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? the king: Why did he come? to see: Why 72 the beggar: What saw he? the beggar. Who overcame he? the beggar. The conclusion is victory: on whose side? the king's; the captive 76 is enriched: on whose side? the beggar's. The catastrophe is a nuptial: on whose side? the king's, no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king, for so stands the comparison; thou 80 the beggar, for so witnesseth thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may: Shall I enforce thy love? I could: Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shalt thou exchange for rags? robes; 84 for tittles? titles; for thyself? me. Thus, expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part. 88

Thine, in the dearest design of Industry,
Don Adriano de Armado.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar

'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey: 92
 Submissive fall his princely feet before,

And he from forage will incline to play.

But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?

Food for his rage, repasture for his den.' 96

Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

What vane? what weathercock? did you ever hear better?

Boyet. I am much deceiv'd but I remember the style.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it ere-while. 100

85 expecting: awaiting

91 Nemean lion; cf. n.

96 repasture: repast

99 but: unless

89 Industry: gallantry

94 from forage: abandoning rapacity

97 plume of feathers: featherhead

100 erewhile: just now

Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court;

A phantasime, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the prince and his book-mates.

Prin. Thou fellow, a word.

Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord. 104

Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.

Prin. From which lord, to which lady?

Cost. From my lord Berowne, a good master of mine,

To a lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline. 108

Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

Here, sweet, put up this: 'twill be thine another day.

Exeunt [Princess and Train].

Boyet. Who is the suitor? who is the suitor?

Ros. Shall I teach you to know?

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.

Ros. Why, she that bears the bow. 112

Finely put off!

Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou marry,

Hang me by the neck if horns that year miscarry.

Finely put on! 116

Ros. Well then, I am the shooter.

Boyet. And who is your deer?

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself: come not near.

Finely put on, indeed!

101 keeps: lives

102 phantasime: fantastic fellow Monarcho; cf. n.

110 sweet: i.e. Rosaline be thine: be of use to thee

112 continent: container, repository bears the bow; cf. n.

113 put off: turned aside 115 horns; cf. n.

Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow. 120

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower. Have I hit her now?

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it? 124

Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it. 128

Ros. 'Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it, my good man.

Boyet. 'An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can.' 132

Exit [Rosaline].

Cost. By my troth, most pleasant: how both did fit it!

Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit it.

Boyet. A mark! O mark but that mark; a mark, says my lady!

Let the mark have a prick in 't, to mete at, if it may be. 136

Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! i' faith your hand is out.

Cost. Indeed a' must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Boyet. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

120 still: ever

133 fit it: make their points

136 prick: point in the center of the target

137 Wide . . . hand: too far to the left

mete: measure, aim

Cost. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin. 140

Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily; your lips grow foul.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir: challenge her to bowl.

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl. [Exeunt Boyet and Maria.]

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown! 144

Lord, lord, how the ladies and I have put him down!
O' my troth, most sweet jests! most incony vulgar wit!
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.

Armado, o' the one side, O! a most dainty man. 148

To see him walk before a lady, and to bear her fan!

To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly a' will swear!

And his page o' t'other side, that handful of wit!

Ah! heavens, it is a most pathological nit. Shout within.

Sola, sola! [Exit running.]

Scene Two

[The Same]

Enter Dull, Holofernes the Pedant, and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly: and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis, in blood; ripe as the pomewater, who now hangeth 4 like a jewel in the ear of cælo, the sky, the welkin,

140 upshoot: upshot, leading shot in a competition pin: wooden the heaven; and anon falleth like a crab on the face of terra, the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, Master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least: but, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.

Dull. 'Twas not a haud credo; 'twas a pricket. 12

Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way, of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or, rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his inclina- 16 tion,—after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or, rather, unlettered, or, ratherest, unconfirmed fashion,—to insert again my haud credo for a deer. 20

Dull. I said the deer was not a haud credo; 'twas a pricket.

Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus!

O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou look! 24

Nath. Sir, he hath not fed of the dainties that are bred in a book.

He hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink: his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts: 28 And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be,
Which we [of] taste and feeling are, for those parts that do fructify in us more than he;

10 first head: fifth year

11 haud credo: I do not think so

12 pricket: buck of the second year

15 facere . . . replication: to make reply

19 unconfirmed: ignorant

23 sod: sodden bis coctus: twice cooked, insipid

30 Which we: we who than he: i.e. than in him

For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a fool:

So were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school: 32

But, omne bene, say I; being of an old Father's mind,
Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

Dull. You two are book-men: can you tell me by your wit,

What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet? 36

Hol. Dictynna, goodman Dull: Dictynna, goodman Dull.

Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phœbe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more; 40

And raught not to five weeks when he came to five-score.

The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'Tis true indeed: the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the 44 allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. And I say the pollution holds in the exchange, for the moon is never but a month old;
and I say beside that 'twas a pricket that the 48
princess killed.

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extem-poral epitaph on the death of the deer? and, to humour the ignorant, [I have] call'd the deer the 52 princess killed, a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good Master Holofernes, perge;
so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter; for it 56 argues facility.

'The preyful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket;

Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The dogs did yell; put L to sore, then sorel jumps from thicket; 60

Or pricket, sore, or else sorel; the people fall a hooting.

If sore be sore, then L to sore makes fifty sores one sorel!

Of one sore I a hundred make, by adding but one more L.'

Nath. A rare talent! 64

Dull. [Aside.] If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple;
a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, 68 shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. 72
But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners; for their sons are well 76

Hol. Mehercle! if their sons be ingenuous, they 80 shall want no instruction; if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But, vir sapit qui pauca loquitur. A soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and the Clown [Costard].

Jaq. God give you good morrow, Master parson. 84

Hol. Master parson, quasi pers-on? And if one should be pierced, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, Master schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshead. 88

Hol. Of piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of conceit in a turf of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine: 'tis pretty; it is well.

Jaq. Good Master parson [giving a letter to 92 Nathaniel], be so good as read me this letter: it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus 96 omne sub umbra Ruminat, and so forth. Ah! good old Mantuan. I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

—Venetia, Venetia, 100

Chi non te vede, non te pretia.

Old Mantuan! old Mantuan! Who understandeth thee not, loves thee not. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Under pardon, sir, what are the con- 104 tents? or, rather, as Horace says in his—What, my soul, verses?

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanze, a verse: 108
lege, domine.

Nath. 'If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

Ah! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd;
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove; 112

Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.

Study his bias leaves and makes his book thine eyes,
Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend:

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice. 116

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire.
Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder, 120

Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O pardon love this wrong,
That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue!

Hol. You find not the apostrophas, and so 124
miss the accent: let me supervise the canzonet.
Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, caret. Ovidius Naso was the man: and why, 128

Jaq. Ay, sir; from one Monsieur Berowne, one of the strange queen's lords. 136

Hol. I will overglance the superscript. 'To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline.' I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto: 'Your ladyship's, in all desired employment, Berowne.'—Sir Nathaniel, this Berowne is one of the votaries with the king; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which, accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the king; it may concern much. Stay not thy compliment; I forgive thy duty: adieu. 144 148

Jaq. Good Costard, go with me. Sir, God save your life! 152

Cost. Have with thee, my girl.

Exit [with Jaquenetta].

Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain Father saith— 156

Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where, if before repast it shall please you to gratify the table with a grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents 164 of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention. I beseech your society. 168

Nath. And thank you too; for society—saith the text—is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it.—[To Dull.] Sir, I do invite you too: 172 you shall not say me nay: pauca verba. Away! the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. Exeunt.

Scene Three

[The Same]

Enter Berowne, with a paper in his hand, alone.

Ber. The king he is hunting the deer; I am coursing myself: they have pitched a toil; I am toiling in a pitch,—pitch that defiles: defile! a foul word! Well, sit thee down, sorrow! for so 4 they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool: well proved, wit! By the Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep: it kills me, I a sheep: well proved again o' my side! I will not 8 love; if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O but her eye!—by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my 12 throat. By heaven, I do love, and it hath taught me to rime, and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rime, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' my sonnets al- 16 ready: the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin if the other three were in. Here comes one 20 with a paper: God give him grace to groan!

He stands aside [or climbs into a tree].

The King entreth.

King. Ay me!

Ber. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven! Proceed, sweet Cupid: thou hast thumped him with 24 thy bird-bolt under the left pap. In faith, secrets!

King. 'So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not

To those fresh morning drops upon the rose, 28

As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows.

Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright

Through the transparent bosom of the deep, 32

As doth thy face through tears of mine give light:

Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep;

No drop but as a coach doth carry thee:

So ridest thou triumphing in my woe. 36

Do but behold the tears that swell in me,

And they thy glory through my grief will show:

But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep

My tears for glasses, and still make me weep. 40
 O queen of queens! how far dost thou excel,
 No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell.
 How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.—
 Sweet leaves, shade folly! Who is he comes here? 44

Enter Longaville. The King steps aside.

What, Longaville! and reading! listen, ear.

Ber. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear!

Long. Ay me! I am forsworn.

Ber. Why, he comes in like a perjure, wearing papers. 48

King. In love, I hope: sweet fellowship in shame!

Ber. One drunkard loves another of the name.

Long. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so?

Ber. I could put thee in comfort: not by two that I know: 52

Thou mak'st the triumvir, the corner-cap of society,
 The shape of love's Tyburn, that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move.

O sweet Maria, empress of my love! 56

These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.

Ber. O! rimes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose:
 Disfigure not his slop.

Long. This same shall go.

He reads the Sonnet.

'Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 60

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?

Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove, 64

Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace, being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is: 68

Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Exhal'st this vapour-vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise 72
To lose an oath to win a paradise!'

Ber. This is the liver-vein, which makes flesh a deity,
A green goose a goddess; pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend! we are much out o' the
way. 76

Long. By whom shall I send this?—Company! stay.
[Steps aside.]

Enter Dumaine.

Ber. All hid, all hid; an old infant play.
Like a demi-god here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye. 80
More sacks to the mill! O heavens! I have my wish.
Dumaine transform'd: four woodcocks in a dish!

Dum. O most divine Kate!

Ber. O most profane coxcomb! 84

Dum. By heaven, the wonder of a mortal eye!

Ber. By earth, she is not, corporal; there you lie.

Dum. Her amber hairs for foul have amber quoted.

Ber. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted. 88

74 liver-vein: i.e. style of a man in love (the liver being the supposed seat of the affections)

78 All hid: i.e. as in the game of hide and seek

82 woodcocks: proverbially silly birds

87 quoted: set down, regarded

Dum. As upright as the cedar.

Ber.

Stoop, I say;

Her shoulder is with child.

Dum.

As fair as day.

Ber. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long.

And I had mine! 92

King. And [I] mine too, good Lord!

Ber. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?

Dum. I would forget her; but a fever she Reigns in my blood, and will remember'd be. 96

Ber. A fever in your blood! why, then incision
Would let her out in saucers: sweet misprision!

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Ber. Once more I'll mark how love can vary wit. 100

Dumaine reads his Sonnet.

Dum. 'On a day, alack the day!

Love, whose month is ever May,

Spied a blossom passing fair

Playing in the wanton air: 104

Through the velvet leaves the wind,

All unseen, can passage find;

That the lover, sick to death,

Wish'd himself the heaven's breath. 108

Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;

Air, would I might triumph so!

But alack! my hand is sworn

Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn: 112

Vow, alack! for youth unmeet,

Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.

Do not call it sin in me,

That I am forsworn for thee; 116

89 Stoop; cf. n.

98 saucers: receptacles for the blood

97 incision: blood-letting misprision: mistake

Thou for whom e'en Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiop were;
 And deny himself for Jove,
 Turning mortal for thy love.' 120

This will I send, and something else more plain,
 That shall express my true love's fasting pain.
 O would the King, Berowne, and Longaville
 Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill, 124
 Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
 For none offend where all alike do dote.

Long. [Advancing.] Dumaine, thy love is far from charity,
 That in love's grief desir'st society: 128
 You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
 To be o'erheard and taken napping so.

King. [Advancing.] Come, sir, you blush: as his your case is such;
 You chide at him, offending twice as much: 132
 You do not love Maria; Longaville
 Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
 Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart
 His loving bosom to keep down his heart. 136
 I have been closely shrouded in this bush,
 And mark'd you both, and for you both did blush.
 I heard your guilty rimes, observ'd your fashion,
 Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion: 140
 Ay me! says one; O Jove! the other cries;
 One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:
 [To Longaville.] You would for paradise break faith and troth;
 [To Dumaine.] And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath. 144

118 Ethiop: i.e. black as a negro

124 example: furnish a precedent for

122 fasting: hungry, longing

What will Berowne say, when that he shall hear
 Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear?
 How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!
 How will he triumph, leap and laugh at it! 148
 For all the wealth that ever I did see,
 I would not have him know so much by me.

Ber. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.

[Descends from the tree.]

Ah! good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me: 152
 Good heart! what grace hast thou, thus to reprove
 These worms for loving, that art most in love?
 Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears
 There is no certain princess that appears: 156
 You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hateful thing:
 Tush! none but minstrels like of sonneting.
 But are you not asham'd! nay, are you not,
 All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot? 160
 You found his mote; the king your mote did see;
 But I a beam do find in each of three.
 O what a scene of foolery have I seen,
 Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen! 164
 O me! with what strict patience have I sat,
 To see a king transformed to a gnat;
 To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
 And profound Solomon to tune a jig, 168
 And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
 And critic Timon laugh at idle toys!
 Where lies thy grief? O! tell me, good Dumaine.
 And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain? 172
 And where my liege's? all about the breast:

150 by: about

158 like of: like

160 o'ershot: wide of the mark

161 You: i.e. Longaville

his: i.e. Dumaine's

164 teen: grief, pain

167 gig: top

166 gnat: a singing insect

169 push-pin: a child's game with pins

168 tune: play, or hum

170 critic: cynic

toys: trifles

A caudle, ho!

King. Too bitter is thy jest.

Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view?

Ber. Not you by me, but I betray'd to you: 176

I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin

To break the vow I am engaged in;

I am betray'd, by keeping company

With men like [men,] men of inconstancy. 180

When shall you see me write a thing in rime?

Or groan for Joan? or spend a minute's time

In pruning me? When shall you hear that I

Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye, 184

A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist,

A leg, a limb?—

King. Soft! Whither away so fast?

A true man or a thief that gallops so?

Ber. I post from love; good lover, let me go. 188

Enter Jaquenetta and Clown [Costard].

Jaq. God bless the king!

King. What present hast thou there?

Cost. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason here?

Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither,

The treason and you go in peace away together. 192

Jaq. I beseech your Grace, let this letter be read:

Our parson misdoubts it; 'twas treason, he said.

King. Berowne, read it over.

He [i.e. Berowne] reads the letter [in dumbshow].

Where hadst thou it? 196

174 caudle: a warm gruel, containing wine and spice, for the sick

180 Cf. n. 183 pruning: adorning

185 state: attitude, pose 189 present: paper to be presented

Jaq. Of Costard.

King. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

[Berowne tears the letter.]

King. How now! what is in you? why dost thou tear it? 200

Ber. A toy, my liege, a toy: your Grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. [Picking up the pieces.] It is Berowne's writing, and here is his name.

Ber. [To Costard.] Ah, you whoreson loggerhead, you were born to do me shame. 204

Guilty, my lord, guilty; I confess, I confess.

King. What?

Ber. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess;

He, he, and you, and you my liege, and I, 208
Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.

O dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Ber. True, true; we are four.

Will these turtles be gone?

King. Hence, sirs; away! 212

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.]

Ber. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O! let us embrace.

As true we are as flesh and blood can be:

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face; 216

207 mess: four persons at one table

212 turtles: turtle-doves, lovers sirs; cf. n.

Young blood doth not obey an old decree.
 We cannot cross the cause why we were born;
 Therefore, of all hands must we be forsworn.
King. What! did these rent lines show some love of thine? 220
Ber. 'Did they,' quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,
 That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,
 At the first opening of the gorgeous east,
 Bows not his vassal head, and, strooken blind, 224
 Kisses the base ground with obedient breast?
 What peremptory eagle-sighted eye
 Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
 That is not blinded by her majesty? 228
King. What zeal, what fury, hath inspir'd thee now?
 My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon;
 She, an attending star, scarce seen a light.
Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berowne. 232
 O, but for my love, day would turn to night!
 Of all complexions the cull'd sovereignty
 Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek;
 Where several worthies make one dignity, 236
 Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.
 Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues,—
 Fie, painted rhetoric! O she needs it not:
 To things of sale a seller's praise belongs; 240
 She passes praise; then praise too short doth blot.
 A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
 Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye:

218 cross . . . born: i.e. hold out against love

219 of all hands: on all hands, in any case

223 the first . . . east: i.e. the rising of the sun

224 strooken: struck

226 peremptory: determined, bold

236 I.e. several beauties make one surpassing beauty

238 flourish: enhancement

239 painted: showy, artificial

- Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born, 244
 And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy.
 O 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine!
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.
Ber. Is ebony like her? O wood divine! 248
 A wife of such wood were felicity.
 O who can give an oath? where is a book?
 That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,
 If that she learn not of her eye to look: 252
 No face is fair that is not full so black.
King. O paradox! Black is the badge of hell,
 The hue of dungeons and the school of night;
 And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well. 256
Ber. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light.
 O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,
 It mourns that painting [and] usurping hair
 Should ravish doters with a false aspect; 260
 And therefore is she born to make black fair.
 Her favour turns the fashion of the days,
 For native blood is counted painting now;
 And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise, 264
 Paints itself black, to imitate her brow.
Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers black.
Long. And since her time are colliers counted bright.
King. And Ethiops of their sweet complexion crack. 268
Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.
Ber. Your mistresses dare never come in rain,
 For fear their colours should be wash'd away.

King. 'Twere good yours did; for, sir, to tell you plain, 272

I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.

Ber. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday here.

King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so dear. 276

Long. Look, here's thy love: [Showing his shoe.] my foot and her face see.

Ber. O, if the streets were paved with thine eyes,
Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.

Dum. O vile! then, as she goes, what upward lies 280
The street should see as she walk'd overhead.

King. But what of this? Are we not all in love?

Ber. Nothing so sure; and thereby all forsworn.

King. Then leave this chat; and good Berowne, now
prove 284

Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn.

Dum. Ay, marry, there; some flattery for this evil.

Long. O some authority how to proceed;

Some tricks, some quilllets, how to cheat the devil. 288

Dum. Some salve for perjury.

Ber. O, 'tis more than need.

Have at you, then, affection's men-at-arms!

Consider what you first did swear unto:

To fast, to study, and to see no woman; 292

Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.

Say, can you fast? your stomachs are too young,

And abstinence engenders maladies.

And where that you have vow'd to study, lords, 296

In that each of you hath forsworn his book,

Can you still dream and pore and thereon look?

275 then: i.e. at doomsday

288 quilllets: quibbles

290 affection's: love's

297 In that: in as much as book: true book, i.e. woman's face

For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
 Have found the ground of study's excellence 300
 Without the beauty of a woman's face?
 From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
 They are the ground, the books, the academes,
 From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire. 304
 Why, universal plodding poisons up
 The nimble spirits in the arteries,
 As motion and long-during action tires
 The sinewy vigour of the traveller. 308
 Now, for not looking on a woman's face,
 You have in that forsworn the use of eyes,
 And study too, the causer of your vow;
 For where is any author in the world 312
 Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?
 Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
 And where we are our learning likewise is:
 Then when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes, 316
 Do we not likewise see our learning there?
 O we have made a vow to study, lords,
 And in that vow we have forsworn our books:
 For when would you, my liege, or you, or you, 320
 In leaden contemplation have found out
 Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes
 Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with?
 Other slow arts entirely keep the brain, 324
 And therefore, finding barren practisers,
 Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil;
 But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,
 Lives not alone immured in the brain, 328
 But, with the motion of all elements,

299-304 *Cf. n.*305 poisons up; *cf. n.*321 leaden: *heavy, dull*324 keep: *remain in*304 Promethean: *divine*306 arteries; *cf. n.*322 numbers: verses, poems

Courses as swift as thought in every power,
 And gives to every power a double power,
 Above their functions and their offices. 332
 It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
 A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
 A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound,
 When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd: 336
 Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
 Than are the tender horns of cockled snails:
 Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste.
 For valour, is not Love a Hercules, 340
 Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
 Subtle as Sphinx; as sweet and musical
 As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
 And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods 344
 Make heaven drowsy with the harmony.
 Never durst poet touch a pen to write
 Until his ink were temper'd with Love's sighs;
 O! then his lines would ravish savage ears, 348
 And plant in tyrants mild humility.
 From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
 They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
 They are the books, the arts, the academes, 352
 That show, contain, and nourish all the world;
 Else none at all in aught proves excellent.
 Then fools you were these women to forswear,
 Or, keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools. 356
 For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love,
 Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men,
 Or for men's sake, the authors of these women;
 Or women's sake, by whom we men are men, 360
 Let us once lose our oaths to find ourselves,

It is religion to be thus forsworn;

For charity itself fulfils the law;

364

And who can sever love from charity?

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!

Ber. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords!

Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,

368

In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing; lay these glozes by:
Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?

King. And win them too: therefore let us devise
Some entertainment for them in their tents.

372

Ber. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;

Then homeward every man attach the hand

Of his fair mistress: in the afternoon

376

We will with some strange pastime solace them,

Such as the shortness of the time can shape;

For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours

Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.

380

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted,
That will betime, and may by us be fitted.

Ber. Allons! allons! Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn;

And justice always whirls in equal measure:

384

Light wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn;

If so, our copper buys no better treasure.

Exeunt.

ACT FIFTH

Scene One

[The King of Navarre's Park]

Enter the Pedant [Holofernes], the Curate [Nathaniel], and Dull.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir: your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious; pleasant without scurrility, witty without affect- 4 tion, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the king's, who is intituled, nomi- 8 nated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te: his humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and 12 his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it. 16

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

Draw out his table-book.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument. I abhor such fanatical phantasies, such insoci- 20 able and point-devise companions; such rackers of orthography, as to speak 'dout,' fine, when he should say 'doubt'; 'det,' when he should pronounce 'debt,'—d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a 24 calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour vocatur nebour, neigh abbreviated ne. This is abhominable, which he would call abominable,—it insinuateth me of insanie: ne intelligis, domine? To 28 make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Laus Deo bene intelligo.

Hol. Bon, bon, fort bon! Priscian a little scratched; 'twill serve. 32

Enter Braggart [Armado], Boy [Moth, and Costard].

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, et gaudeo.

Arm. [To Moth.] Chirrah!

Hol. Quare chirrah, not sirrah? 36

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. [Aside to Costard.] They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the 40 scraps.

*Cost. O! they have lived long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word; for thou art not so long 44 by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon.*

not lettered?

Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book. What is a, b, spelt backward, with the horn on his head? 52

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth. Ba! most silly sheep with a horn. You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant? 56

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them,—a, e, i,—

Moth. The sheep; the other two concludes 60 it,—o, u.

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venew of wit!
snip, snap, quick and home! it rejoiceth my 64 intellect: true wit!

Moth. Offered by a child to an old man;
which is wit-old.

Hol. What is the figure? what is the figure? 68

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputest like an infant; go, whip thy gig.

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and 72
I will whip about your infamy circum circa. A gig of a cuckold's horn.

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread. Hold, 76

Hol. O! I smell false Latin! dunghill for 84 unguem.

Arm. Arts-man, præambula: we will be singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the 88 mountain?

Hol. Or mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain. 92

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the king's most sweet pleasure and affection to congratulate the princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day, which the 96 rude multitude call the afternoon.

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon: the word is well culled, 100 chose, sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir; I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye, very good friend. 104 For what is inward between us, let it pass: I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy; I beseech thee, apparel thy head: and among other importunate and most serious designs, and of great 108 import indeed, too, but let that pass: for I must tell thee, it will please his Grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus dally with my excre- 112 ment, with my mustachio: but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, I recount no fable:

some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man 116 of travel, that hath seen the world: but let that pass. The very all of all is, but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, that the king would have me present the princess, sweet chuck, with some 120 delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions and sudden breaking out of mirth, as 124
it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Nathaniel, as concerning 128 some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendered by our assistants, the king's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman, 132 before the princess; I say, none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them? 136

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself, or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb, or joint, shall pass Pompey the Great; the page, Hercules,— 140 enough for that Worthy's thumb: he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? he shall present 144
Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of 148
the audience hiss, you may cry, 'Well done, Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!' that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it. 152

Arm. For the rest of the Worthies?—

Hol. I will play three myself.

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing? 156

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antick. I beseech you, follow.

Hol. Via, goodman Dull! thou hast spoken 160
no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I 164 will play on the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull, to our sport,
away! 165

Exeunt.

145 Hercules in minority; cf. n.

159 antick: grotesque entertainment

165 tabor: a small drum

158 fadge: succeed

Scene Two

[The same. Before the Princess's Pavilion]

Enter the Ladies [i.e. Princess, Katharine, Rosaline, and Maria].

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.

A lady wall'd about with diamonds!

Look you what I have from the loving king. 4

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Prin. Nothing but this! yes, as much love in rime
As would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper,
Writ o' both sides the leaf, margent and all, 8
That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his godhead wax;
For he hath been five thousand year a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too. 12

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him: a' kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy;
And so she died: had she been light, like you,
Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit, 16
She might ha' been a grandam ere she died;
And so may you, for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light
word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark. 20

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;

166 hay: country dance

2 fairings: presents, originally such as were bought at a fair

9 That: so that (there being no blank space left)

10 wax: grow (with quibble on sealing-wax)

12 shrewd . . . gallows: cunning, roguish knave

13 Cf. n.

20 condition: temperament

22 in snuff: in anger, ill (with pun on the snuff of a candle)

Therefore, I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it still i' the dark. 24

Kath. So do not you, for you are a light wench.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not. O! that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason; for, 'past cure is still past care.' 28

Prin. Well bandied both; a set of wit well play'd.

But Rosaline, you have a favour too:

Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew:

An if my face were but as fair as yours, 32

My favour were as great; be witness this.

Nay, I have verses too, I thank Berowne:

The numbers true; and, were the numb'ring too,

I were the fairest goddess on the ground: 36

I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.

O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!

Prin. Anything like?

Ros. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise. 40

Prin. Beauteous as ink; a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Ros. 'Ware pencils, ho! let me not die your debtor,
My red dominical, my golden letter: 44

O, that your face were not so full of O's!

Prin. A pox of that jest! and I beshrew all shrows!
But, Katharine, what was sent to you from fair Dumaine?

Kath. Madam, this glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain? 48

26 weigh; cf. n.

35 numbers: rhythm

40 letters; cf. n.

43 'Ware pencils; cf. n.

45 O's: marks left by the smallpox

numb'ring: estimate

30 favour: gift; also face

42 text B; cf. n.

44 red dominical; cf. n.

46 shrows: shrews

Kath. Yes, madam; and moreover,
Some thousand verses of a faithful lover:
A huge translation of hypocrisy,
Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity. 52

Mar. This, and these pearls to me sent Longaville:
The letter is too long by half a mile.

Prin. I think no less. Dost thou not wish in heart
The chain were longer and the letter short? 56

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.
That same Berowne I'll torture ere I go. 60

O that I knew he were but in by the week!

How I would make him fawn, and beg, and seek,

And wait the season, and observe the times,

And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rimes, 64

And shape his service wholly to my hests,

And make him proud to make me proud that jests!

So perttaunt-like would I o'ersway his state

That he should be my fool, and I his fate. 68

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd,

As wit turn'd fool: folly, in wisdom hatch'd,

Hath wisdom's warrant and the help of school

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool. 72

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excess
As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note

As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote; 76

Since all the power thereof it doth apply

To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter Boyet.

51 translation of hypocrisy; cf. n.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter! Where's her Grace? 80

Prin. Thy news, Boyet?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!—

Arm, wenches, arm! encounters mounted are Against your peace: Love doth approach disguis'd,
Armed in arguments; you'll be surpris'd: 84
Muste your wits; stand in your own defence;
Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Denis to Saint Cupid! What are they
That charge their breath against us? say, scout, say. 88

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore
I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour,
When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold address 92
The king and his companions: warily
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And overheard what you shall overhear;
That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here. 96
Their herald is a pretty knavish page,
That well by heart hath conn'd his embassy:
Action and accent did they teach him there;
'Thus must thou speak, and thus thy body bear.' 100
And ever and anon they made a doubt
Presence majestical would put him out;
'For,' quoth the king, 'an angel shalt thou see;
Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously.' 104
The boy replied, 'An angel is not evil;
I should have fear'd her had she been a devil.'
With that all laugh'd and clapp'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praises bolder. 108

82 encounters: assailants

87 Saint Denis: patron saint of France

92 address: coming straight

96 by and by: soon

101 made a doubt: expressed fear

104 audaciously: boldly

One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and swore
 A better speech was never spoke before;
 Another, with his finger and his thumb,
 Cry'd 'Via! we will do 't, come what will come'; 112
 The third he caper'd and cried, 'All goes well';
 The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.
 With that, they all did tumble on the ground,
 With such a zealous laughter, so profound, 116
 That in this spleen ridiculous appears,
 To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what? come they to visit us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparell'd thus, 120

Like Muscovites or Russians, as I guess.
 Their purpose is to parle, to court and dance;
 And every one his love-feat will advance
 Unto his several mistress, which they'll know 124
 By favours several which they did bestow.

Prin. And will they so? the gallants shall be task'd:
 For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd,
 And not a man of them shall have the grace, 128
 Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.
 Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear,
 And then the king will court thee for his dear:
 Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me thine, 132
 So shall Berowne take me for Rosaline,
 And change you favours too; so shall your loves
 Woo contrary, deceiv'd by these removes.

Ros. Come on, then; wear the favours most in sight. 136

Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is, to cross theirs:

109 fleer'd: grinned

118 solemn: sober

126 task'd: given a task or problem

117 spleen ridiculous: ridiculous merriment

121 Like Muscovites; cf. n.

135 removes: exchanges

They do it but in mockery merriment;
And mock for mock is only my intent. 140

Their several counsels they unbosom shall
To loves mistook and so be mock'd withal
Upon the next occasion that we meet,
With visages display'd, to talk and greet. 144

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us to 't?

Prin. No, to the death, we will not move a foot:
Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace;
But while 'tis spoke each turn away her face. 148

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,

And quite divorce his memory from his part.

Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt,
The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out. 152

There's no such sport as sport by sport o'erthrown,
To make theirs ours and ours none but our own:
So shall we stay, mocking intended game,
And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame. 156

Sound Trumpets.

Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd; the maskers come. [The Ladies mask.]

Enter Blackamoors with music; the Boy [Moth] with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disguised.

Moth. 'All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!'

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffeta.

Moth. 'A holy parcel of the fairest dames, 160

The Ladies turn their backs to him.

That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!'

Ber. 'Their eyes,' villain, 'their eyes.'

Moth. 'That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!
Out—' 164

154 theirs: their sport

155 intended game: the jest they intend

159 taffeta: i.e. the taffeta, or silk, masks

Boyet. True; 'out,' indeed.

Moth. 'Out of your favours, heavenly spirits, vouchsafe

Not to behold'—

Ber. 'Once to behold,' rogue. 168

Moth. 'Once to behold with your sun-beamed eyes,
—with your sun-beamed eyes'—

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;
You were best call it 'daughter-beamed eyes.' 172

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Ber. Is this your perfectness? be gone, you rogue!
[Exit Moth.]

Ros. What would these strangers? know their minds,

Boyet:

If they do speak our language, 'tis our will 176

That some plain man recount their purposes:

Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the princess?

Ber. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation. 180

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone. 184

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles,
To tread a measure with her on this grass.

Boyet. They say that they have measur'd many a mile,

To tread a measure with you on this grass. 188

Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile: if they have measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easily told.

Boyet. If to come hither you have measur'd miles, 192

And many miles, the princess bids you tell
How many inches do fill up one mile.

Ber. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.

Boyet. She hears herself.

Ros. How many weary steps, 196
Of many weary miles you have o'ergone,
Are number'd in the travel of one mile?

Ber. We number nothing that we spend for you:
Our duty is so rich, so infinite, 200
That we may do it still without accompt.
Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too. 204

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!
Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine,
Those clouds remov'd, upon our wat'ry eyne.

Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter; 208
Thou now requests but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure vouchsafe but one change.
Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.

Ros. Play, music, then! Nay, you must do it soon. 212
[Music plays.]

Not yet! no dance! thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estrang'd?

Ros. You took the moon at full, but now she's chang'd.

King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man. 216
The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

201 accompt: reckoning

209 requests: requestest

216 man: i.e. man in the moon

207 eyne: eyes

210 change: round or 'figure' in dancing

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, and come here by chance,

We'll not be nice: take hands: we will not dance. 220

King. Why take we hands then?

Ros. Only to part friends.

Curtsy, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure: be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price. 224

King. Prize you yourselves. What buys your company?

Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be bought: and so, adieu;

Twice to your visor, and half once to you! 228

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private, then.

King. I am best pleas'd with that.

[They converse apart.]

Ber. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee.

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there are three. 232

Ber. Nay then, two treys, an if you grow so nice,

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey: well run, dice!

There's half a dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu:

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you. 236

Ber. One word in secret.

225 Prize: set a price on

233 treys: threes

234 Metheglin: mead containing honey beer malmsey: a sweet wine

228 Twice: i.e. twice adieu

wort: sweet unfermented
236 cog: cheat

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Ber. Thou griev'st my gall.

Prin. Gall! bitter.

Ber. Therefore meet.

[They converse apart.]

Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?

Mar. Name it.

Dum. Fair lady,—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord! 240

Take that for your 'fair lady.'

Dum. Please it you,

As much in private, and I'll bid adieu.

[They converse apart.]

Kath. What! was your vizard made without a tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask. 244

Kath. O for your reason; quickly, sir; I long.

Long. You have a double tongue within your mask,
And would afford my speechless vizard half.

Kath. 'Veal,' quoth the Dutchman. Is not 'veal' a calf? 248

Long. A calf, fair lady!

Kath. No, a fair lord calf.

Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half:

Take all, and wean it: it may prove an ox.

Long. Look, how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks. 252

Will you give horns, chaste lady? do not so.

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I die.

238 meet: fitting

248 Veal: i.e. well; cf. n.

243 tongue; cf. n.

250 part: divide; cf. n.

Kath. Bleat softly then; the butcher hears you cry. 256

[They converse apart.]

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the razor's edge invisible,
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen,
Above the sense of sense; so sensible 260
Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings
Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.

Ros. Not one word more, my maids: break off, break off.

Ber. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff! 264

King. Farewell, mad wenches: you have simple wits.

Exeunt [King and Lords].

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovits.

Are these the breed of wits so wonder'd at?

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out. 268

Ros. Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross; fat, fat.

Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!

Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night?

Or ever, but in vizards, show their faces? 272

This pert Berowne was out of countenance quite.

Ros. They were all in lamentable cases.

The king was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Berowne did swear himself out of all suit. 276

Mar. Dumaine was at my service, and his sword:

'No point,' quoth I: my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said, I came o'er his heart;

260 sense of sense: i.e. perception sensible: sensitive

261 conference: conversation conceits: fancies

264 dry-beaten: cudgeled 269 Well-liking: plump

270 kingly-poor flout: a fling poor for a king

275 weeping-ripe for: ready to weep for want of

278 No point; cf. II. i. 188

And trow you what he call'd me?

Prin.

Qualm, perhaps. 280

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin.

Go, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute-caps.
But will you hear? the king is my love sworn.

Prin. And quick Berowne hath plighted faith to me. 284

Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.

Mar. Dumaine is mine, as sure as bark on tree.

Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:

Immediately they will again be here 288

In their own shapes; for it can never be

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?

Boyet.

They will, they will, God knows;
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows: 292
Therefore change favours; and, when they repair,
Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.

Boyet. Fair ladies, mask'd, are roses in their bud: 296
Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,
Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.

Prin. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do,
If they return in their own shapes to woo? 300

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mock them still, as well known as disguis'd.
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear; 304
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shows and prologue vilely penn'd,
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,

280 Qualm: calm; cf. n.

282 statute-caps: woollen caps; cf. n.

290 digest: put up with, 'swallow'

297 commixture: complexion

298 vailing: letting fall

blown: full blown

Should be presented at our tent to us. 308

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.

Prin. Whip to your tents, as roes runs o'er land.

Exeunt [Princess, Ros., Kath., and Maria].

Enter the King and the rest [of the Lords].

King. Fair sir, God save you! Where is the princess?

Boyet. Gone to her tent. Please it your majesty, 312
Command me any service to her thither?

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord.

Exit.

Ber. This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons pease, 316
And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedlar, and retails his wares

At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs;

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know, 320

Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve;

Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve:

He can carve too, and lisp: why, this is he 324

That kiss'd his hand away in courtesy.

This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice,

That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms: nay, he can sing 328

A mean most meanly, and in ushering

Mend him who can: the ladies call him sweet;

The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.

This is the flower that smiles on every one, 332

To show his teeth as white as whales-bone;

310 runs: run

319 wakes: night festivals wassails: drinking bouts

324 can carve: knows the art of amorous glance and gesture

327 tables: backgammon

329 mean: tenor

333 whales-bone: whale's bone, walrus tusk

And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongu'd Boyet.

King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart, 336

That put Armado's page out of his part!

Enter the Ladies [with Boyet].

Ber. See where it comes! Behaviour, what wert thou,

Till this man show'd thee? and what art thou now?

King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day! 340

Prin. 'Fair,' in 'all hail,' is foul, as I conceive.

King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better: I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you, and purpose now 344

To lead you to our court: vouchsafe it then.

Prin. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:

Nor God, nor I, delights in perjurd men.

King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke: 348

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Prin. You nickname virtue; vice you should have spoke;

For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.

Now, by my maiden honour, yet as pure 352

As the unsullied lily, I protest,

A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not yield to be your house's guest;

So much I hate a breaking cause to be 356

Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.

King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,

Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear; 360

We have had pastimes here and pleasant game.

A mess of Russians left us but of late.

King. How, madam! Russians?

Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;

Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state. 364

Ros. Madam, speak true. It is not so, my lord:

My lady, to the manner of the days,

In courtesy gives undeserving praise.

We four, indeed, confronted were with four 368

In Russian habit: here they stay'd an hour,

And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,

They did not bless us with one happy word.

I dare not call them fools; but this I think, 372

When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.

Ber. This jest is dry to me. Gentle sweet,

Your wit makes wise things foolish: when we greet,

With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye, 376

By light we lose light: your capacity

Is of that nature that to your huge store

Wise things seem foolish and rich things but poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye— 380

Ber. I am a fool, and full of poverty.

Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Ber. O, I am yours, and all that I possess. 384

Ros. All the fool mine?

Ber. I cannot give you less.

Ros. Which of the vizards was it that you wore?

Ber. Where? when? what vizard? why demand you this?

Ros. There, then, that vizard; that superfluous case 388

362 mess; cf. IV. iii. 207

366 to the manner: after the fashion

374 dry: without savor (with pun on 'thirsty')

That hid the worse, and show'd the better face.

King. We were descried: they'll mock us now down-right.

Dum. Let us confess, and turn it to a jest.

Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad? 392

Ros. Help! hold his brows! he'll sound. Why look you pale?

Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

Ber. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.

Can any face of brass hold longer out?— 396

Here stand I, lady; dart thy skill at me;

Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;

Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit; 400

And I will wish thee never more to dance,

Nor never more in Russian habit wait.

O, never will I trust to speeches penn'd,

Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue, 404

Nor never come in vizard to my friend,

Nor woo in rime, like a blind harper's song.

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,

Three-pil'd hyperboles, spruce affectation, 408

Figures pedantical; these summer flies

Have blown me full of maggot ostentation:

I do forswear them; and I here protest,

By this white glove,—how white the hand, God knows,— 412

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd

In russet yeas and honest kersey noes:

And, to begin, wench,—so God help me, la!—

393 sound: swoon

405 friend: mistress

408 Three-pil'd: having three piles, superfine

414 russet: homespun, homely

401 wish: invite

406 blind harper; cf. n.

My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw. 416

Ros. Sans 'sans,' I pray you.

Ber. Yet I have a trick

Of the old rage: bear with me, I am sick;

I'll leave it by degrees. Soft! let us see:

Write, 'Lord have mercy on us' on those three; 420

They are infected, in their hearts it lies;

They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:

These lords are visited; you are not free,

For the Lord's tokens on you do I see. 424

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.

Ber. Our states are forfeit: seek not to undo us.

Ros. It is not so. For how can this be true,

That you stand forfeit, being those that sue? 428

Ber. Peace! for I will not have to do with you.

Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Ber. Speak for yourselves: my wit is at an end.

King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression 432

Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were you not here, but even now, disguis'd?

King. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd?

King. I was, fair madam.

Prin. When you then were here, 436

What did you whisper in your lady's ear?

King. That more than all the world I did respect her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject
her.

420 'Lord have mercy'; cf. n.

424 Lord's tokens: cf. n.

428 sue: equivocally for prosecute and entreat

435 well advis'd: in right mind

423 visited: plague-smitten

426 states: estates

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace! peace! forbear; 440

Your oath once broke, you force not to forswear.

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will; and therefore keep it. Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your ear? 444

Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me dear
As precious eyesight, and did value me
Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover. 448

Prin. God give thee joy of him! the noble lord
Most honourably doth uphold his word.

King. What mean you, madam? by my life, my troth,
I never swore this lady such an oath. 452

Ros. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this: but take it, sir, again.

King. My faith and this the princess I did give:
I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve. 456

Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;
And Lord Berowne, I thank him, is my dear.
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?

Ber. Neither of either; I remit both twain. 460
I see the trick on 't: here was a consent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy.
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany, 464

Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick,
That smiles his cheek in years, and knows the trick
To make my lady laugh when she's dispos'd,

441 force not: i.e. find it easy

463 Christmas comedy: absurd burlesque

464 please-man: flatterer zany: clown

465 trencher-knight: serving-man, parasite

466 years: i.e. wrinkles, such as belong to years

461 consent: conspiracy

Told our intents before; which once disclos'd, 468
 The ladies did change favours, and then we,
 Following the signs, woo'd but the sign of she.
 Now, to our perjury to add more terror,
 We are again forsworn, in will and error. 472
 Much upon this it is: [To Boyet.] and might not you
 Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
 Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
 And laugh upon the apple of her eye? 476
 And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
 Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
 You put our page out: go, you are allow'd;
 Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud. 480
 You leer upon me, do you? there's an eye
 Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily

Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.

Ber. Lo! he is tilting straight. Peace! I have done. 484

Enter Clown [i.e. Costard].

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.

Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know

Whether the three Worthies shall come in or no.

Ber. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vara fine, 488

For every one pursents three.

Ber. And three times thrice is nine.

Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir, I hope, it is not so.

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir; we know
 what we know:

473 upon this: in this fashion

476 apple: pupil

483 manage: horsemanship

491 beg us: prove us fools; cf. n.

475 squire: square, rule

479 allow'd: privileged to jest

career: swift encounter of knights

I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir,—

Ber.

Is not nine? 492

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know where-until it doth amount.

Ber. By Jove, I always took three threes for nine.

Cost. O Lord, sir! it were pity you should get 496 your living by reckoning, sir.

Ber. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir! the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth amount: 500 for mine own part, I am, as they say, but to par-fect one man in one poor man, Pompion the Great, sir.

Ber. Art thou one of the Worthies?

504

Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompey the Great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.

508

Ber. Go, bid them prepare.

Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care.

Exit.

King. Berowne, they will shame us; let them not approach.

Ber. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 'tis some policy

512

To have one show worse than the king's and his company.

King. I say they shall not come.

Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'errule you now.
That sport best pleases that doth least know how; 516
Where zeal strives to content, and the contents
Dies in the zeal of that which it presents;
Their form confounded makes most form in mirth,

When great things labouring perish in their birth. 520

Ber. A right description of our sport, my lord.

Enter Braggart [i.e. Armado].

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath as will utter a brace of words. 524

[Armado converses with the King, and delivers a paper to him.]

Prin. Doth this man serve God?

Ber. Why ask you?

Prin. A' speaks not like a man of God his making.

Arm. That is all one, my fair, sweet, honey 528 monarch; for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too-too vain; too-too vain: but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna de la guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, 532 most royal couplement! Exit.

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the Great; the parish curate, 536 Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pe-
dant, Judas Maccabæus:

And if these four Worthies in their first show thrive,
These four will change habits and present the other five, 540

Ber. There is five in the first show.

King. You are deceived, 'tis not so.

Ber. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy:— 544

Abate throw at novum, and the whole world again

521 our sport: i.e. the disguise as Muscovites

527 God his: God's

531 fortuna . . . guerra: the fortune of war

533 couplement: couple, pair

543 hedge-priest: poor, illiterate priest

545 Abate . . . novum: except for a rare throw of the dice; cf. n.

Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein.

King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain.

Enter [Costard armed, for] Pompey.

Cost. 'I Pompey am,—'

Boyet. You lie, you are not he. 548

Cost. 'I Pompey am,—'

Boyet. With libbard's head on knee.

Ber. Well said, old mocker: I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. 'I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the Big,—'

Dum. 'The Great.' 552

Cost. It is 'Great,' sir; 'Pompey surnam'd the Great;
That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat:

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,

And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France.' 556

If your ladyship would say, 'Thanks, Pompey,' I had done.

Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey.

Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope
I was perfect. I made a little fault in 'Great.' 560

Ber. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Worthy.

Enter Curate [Nathaniel] for Alexander.

Nath. 'When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;

By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might: 564

My scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander,—'

549 libbard's: leopard's; cf. n.

Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Ber. Your nose smells 'no,' in this, most tender-smelling knight.

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Alexander. 568

Nath. 'When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;—'

Boyet. Most true; 'tis right: you were so, Alisander.

Ber. Pompey the Great,—

Cost. Your servant, and Costard. 572

Ber. Take away the conqueror, take away Alisander.

Cost. [To Nathaniel.] O! sir, you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this: your 576 lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to Ajax: he will be the ninth Worthy. A conqueror, and afeard to speak! run away for shame, Alisander! [Nathaniel 580 retires.] There, an't shall please you: a foolish mild man; an honest man, look you, and soon dashed! He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler; but, for Alisan- 584 der,—alas, you see how 'tis,—a little o'erparted. But there are Worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort.

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey. 588

Enter Pedant [Holofernes] for Judas, and the Boy [Moth] for Hercules.

Hol. 'Great Hercules is presented by this imp,
Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canus;

566 right: straight; cf. n.

576 painted cloth; cf. n.

577 lion . . . poll-axe; cf. n.

585 o'erparted: i.e. given a part too difficult for him

590 canus: canis, dog

And, when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,

Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus. 592

Quoniam he seemeth in minority,

Ergo I come with this apology.'

Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish.—

Exit Boy.

'Judas I am.—'

593

Dum. A Judas!

Hol. Not Iscariot, sir.

'Judas I am, ycleped Maccabæus.'

Dum. Judas Maccabæus clipt is plain Judas. 600

Ber. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?

Hol. 'Judas I am.—'

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir? 604

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder.

Ber. Well follow'd: Judas was hanged on an elder.

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance. 608

Ber. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern-head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin. 612

Ber. A death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pommel of Cæsar's falchion.

Dum. The carved-bone face on a flask. 616

Ber. Saint George's half-cheek in a brooch.

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Ber. Ay, and worn in the cap of a toothdrawer.

592 manus: hands

594 Ergo: therefore

607 elder; cf. n.

612 bodkin: small dagger

616 flask: powder flask

593 Quoniam: since

601 A kissing traitor; cf. n.

611 cittern: cithern, guitar

613 death's face: death's head

619 toothdrawer; cf. n.

And now forward; for we have put thee in countenance. 620

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Ber. False: we have given thee faces.

Hol. But you have outfaced them all.

Ber. An thou wert a lion, we would do so. 624

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go.

And so adieu, sweet Jude! nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the later end of his name.

Ber. For the ass to the Jude? give it him:—Jud-as, away! 628

Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for Monsieur Judas! it grows dark, he may stumble. [Hol. retires.]

Prin. Alas! poor Maccabæus, how hath he been baited.

Enter Braggart [i.e. Armado, for Hector].

Ber. Hide thy head, Achilles: here comes 632
Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me,
I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of 636
this.

Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-timbered. 640

Long. His calf is too big for Hector's.

Dum. More calf, certain.

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.

Ber. This cannot be Hector. 644

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

634 by: about, near

640 clean-timbered: well-built

636 Trojan: Trojan, contemptible fellow

643 small: small of the leg

Arm. 'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty, Gave Hector a gift,—' 648

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Ber. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven. 652

Arm. Peace!

'The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;
A man so breath'd, that certain he would fight ye 656
From morn till night, out of his pavilion.
I am that flower,—'

Dum. That mint.

Long. That columbine.

Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it 660 runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound.

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten;
sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried; 664 when he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. [To the Princess.] Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing.

Berowne steps forth.

Prin. Speak, brave Hector; we are much de- 668 lighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet Grace's slipper.

Boyet. [Aside to Dumaine.] Loves her by the foot. 672

Dum. [Aside to Boyet.] He may not by the yard.

Arm. 'This Hector far surmounted Hannibal,—'

[Berowne returns with Costard.]

656 breath'd: endowed with breath, vigorous

Cost. The party is gone; fellow Hector, she is 676 gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou?

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Troy-an, the poor wench is cast away: she's quick; 680
the child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Arm. Dost thou infamonize me among potentates? Thou shalt die.

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipped for Ja- 681 quenetta that is quick by him, and hanged for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey! 688

Ber. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!

Dum. Hector trembles..

Ber. Pompey is moved. More Ates, more 692
Ates! stir them on! stir them on!

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Ber. Ay, if a' have no more man's blood in 's belly than will sup a flea. 696

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole, like a northern man: I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword. I bepray you, let me borrow my arms 700
again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies!

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey! 704

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see, Pompey is uncasing for 676 party: i.e. Jaquenetta

682 infamonize: infamize

692 Ates: mischief; cf. n.

699 northern man: countryman from the north, boor

705 take . . . lower: (1) help you to strip, (2) humiliate you the combat? What mean you? you will lose your reputation. 708

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt.

Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey hath made the challenge. 712

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Ber. What reason have you for 't?

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt. I go woolward for penance. 716

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dish-clout of Jaquenetta's, and that a' wears next his heart for a favour. 720

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur Marcade.

Mar. God save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Marcade;

But that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mar. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring 724
Is heavy in my tongue. The king your father—

Prin. Dead, for my life!

Mar. Even so: my tale is told.

Ber. Worthies, away! The scene begins to 728 cloud.

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath.
I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a 732 soldier.

Exeunt Worthies.

King. How fares your majesty?

Prin. Boyet, prepare: I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so: I do beseech you, stay. 736

Prin. Prepare, I say. I thank you, gracious lords,

716 woolward: i.e. with wool, instead of linen, next to the skin

732 hole of discretion; cf. n.

For all your fair endeavours; and entreat,
 Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe
 In your rich wisdom to excuse or hide 740
 The liberal opposition of our spirits,
 If over-boldly we have borne ourselves
 In the converse of breath; your gentleness
 Was guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord! 744
 A heavy heart bears not a humble tongue,
 Excuse me so, coming too short of thanks
 For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely forms 748

All causes to the purpose of his speed,
 And often, at his very loose, decides
 That which long process could not arbitrate:
 And though the mourning brow of progeny 752
 Forbid the smiling courtesy of love
 The holy suit which fain it would convince;
 Yet, since love's argument was first on foot,
 Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it 756
 From what it purpos'd; since, to wail friends lost
 Is not by much so wholesome-profitable
 As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not: my griefs are double. 760

Ber. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;

And by these badges understand the king.
 For your fair sakes have we neglected time,
 Play'd foul play with our oaths. Your beauty, ladies, 764

741 liberal: over-free

745 humble: suited to the offering of thanks and apologies

748, 749 Cf. n.

754 convince: give proof of

762 badges; cf. n.

743 converse of breath: conversation

750 loose: loosing, parting

760 double: excessive (?)

Hath much deform'd us, fashioning our humours
 Even to the opposed end of our intents;
 And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous,—
 As love is full of unbefitting strains; 768
 All wanton as a child, skipping and vain;
 Form'd by the eye, and, therefore, like the eye,
 Full of straying shapes, of habits and of forms,
 Varying in subjects, as the eye doth roll 772
 To every varied object in his glance:—
 Which parti-coated presence of loose love
 Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
 Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities, 776
 Those heavenly eyes, that look into these faults,
 Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies,
 Our love being yours, the error that love makes
 Is likewise yours: we to ourselves prove false, 780
 By being once false for ever to be true
 To those that make us both,—fair ladies, you:
 And even that falsehood, in itself a sin,
 Thus purifies itself and turns to grace. 784

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters full of love;
 Your favours, the ambassadors of love;
 And, in our maiden council, rated them
 At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy, 788
 As bombast and as lining to the time.
 But more devout than this in our respects
 Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
 In their own fashion, like a merriment. 792

Dum. Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest.

Long. So did our looks.

766 In a way quite opposite to our intentions

768 strains: impulses

778 Suggested: tempted

790 devout: serious

774 parti-coated: motley-coated

789 bombast: padding

respects: reflections

Ros. We did not quote them so.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short 796
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your Grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this:
If for my love,—as there is no such cause,— 800
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage,
Remote from all the pleasures of the world; 804
There stay, until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about the annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life
Change not your offer made in heat of blood; 808
If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds,
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial and last love;
Then, at the expiration of the year, 812
Come challenge me, challenge me by these deserts,
And, by this virgin palm now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and, till that instant, shut
My woful self up in a mourning house, 816
Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death.
If this thou do deny, let our hands part;
Neither intitled in the other's heart. 820

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye!

794 quote: cf. IV. iii. 87

806 Completed the twelve months of the year

809 weeds: clothing

820 intitled: having any right

799 dear: amiable

811 last: remain

Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast. 824

Ber. And what to me, my love? and what to me?

Ros. You must be purged too, your sins are rack'd:
You are attaint with faults and perjury;
Therefore, if you my favour mean to get, 828
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,
But seek the weary beds of people sick.

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me?

Kath. A wife! A beard, fair health, and honesty; 832

With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dum. O! shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife?

Kath. Not so, my lord. A twelvemonth and a day
I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say: 836
Come when the king doth to my lady come;
Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then.

Kath. Yet swear not, lest ye be forsworn again. 840

Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.

Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long.

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young. 844

Ber. Studies my lady? mistress, look on me.
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there;
Impose some service on me for thy love. 848

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord Berowne,
Before I saw you; and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts, 852

824 Cf. n.

826 rack'd: i.e. unnaturally extended

844 liker; cf. n.

852 comparisons: personalities

825-830 Cf. n.

843 stay: wait

850 large: lavish

Which you on all estates will execute
 That lie within the mercy of your wit:
 To weed this wormwood from your fruitful brain,
 And therewithal to win me, if you please,— 856
 Without the which I am not to be won,—
 You shall this twelvemonth term, from day to day,
 Visit the speechless sick, and still converse
 With groaning wretches; and your task shall be 860
 With all the fierce endeavour of your wit
 To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Ber. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
 It cannot be; it is impossible: 864
 Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
 Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
 Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools. 868
 A jest's prosperity lies in the ear
 Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
 Of him that makes it: then, if sickly ears,
 Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans, 872
 Will hear your idle scorns, continue then,
 And I will have you and that fault withal;
 But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
 And I shall find you empty of that fault, 876
 Right joyful of your reformation.

Ber. A twelvemonth! well, befall what will befall,
 I'll jest a twelvemonth in an hospital.

Prin. [To the King.] Ay, sweet my lord; and so I take my leave. 880

King. No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Ber. Our wooing doth not end like an old play;
 Jack hath not Jill; these ladies' courtesies

853 estates: ranks
 872 dear: intense

874 withal: also

865 agony: i.e. of death
 881 bring: attend

Might well have made our sport a comedy. 884

King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,
And then 'twill end.

Ber. That's too long for a play.

Enter Braggart [Armado].

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me,—

Prin. Was not that Hector? 888

Dum. The worthy knight of Troy.

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vowed to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three 892 year. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the cuckoo? it should have followed in the end of our show. 896

King. Call them forth quickly; we will do so.

Arm. Holla! approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter; this Ver, the Spring;
the one maintained by the owl, th' other by the 900
cuckoo. Ver, begin.

The Song.

[Spring.]

'When daisies pied and violets blue

And lady-smocks all silver-white

And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue 904

Do paint the meadows with delight,

The cuckoo then, on every tree,

Mocks married men; for thus sings he,

Cuckoo; 908

899 Cf. n.

903 lady-smocks: cardamine pratensis, May-flower

904 cuckoo-buds: buttercups or cowslips

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O, word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

'When shepherds pipe on oaten straws,
And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks, 912

When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws,
And maidens bleach their summer smocks,

The cuckoo then, on every tree,
Mocks married men; for thus sings he, 916

Cuckoo;

Cuckoo, cuckoo: O, word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!'

Winter.

'When icicles hang by the wall, 920

And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,

And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd, and ways be foul, 924

Then nightly sings the staring owl,
Tu-who;

Tu-whit, tu-who—a merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot. 928

'When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,

And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marian's nose looks red and raw, 932

When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-who;

Tu-whit, tu-who—a merry note, 936
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.'

913 turtles: turtle-doves

930 saw: maxim or wise talk

933 crabs: wild, sour apples

928 keel: cool by stirring

bowl: i.e. wassail-bowl

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You, that way: we, this way.

Exeunt Omnes.

FINIS.

NOTES

Dramatis Personæ. A list of characters for this play was first supplied by Rowe in 1709. Berowne (spelled 'Biron' in the second and later Folios and in most modern editions) is accented on the second syllable, and rimes with 'moon' (cf. IV. iii. 232). Longaville rimes with 'ill' (IV. iii. 123) but sometimes also with 'compile' (IV. iii. 133) and with 'mile' (V. ii. 53). Boyet rimes with 'debt' (V. ii. 335); Rosaline with 'mine' (IV. i. 53) and 'thine' (V. ii. 133). Moth was probably pronounced as if spelled 'Mote' (cf. IV. iii. 161, where the common noun, mote, is spelled 'Moth' in the early editions). Armado is often spelled 'Armatho,' which probably indicates the pronunciation (Spanish d = th).

Unusual irregularities are found in the quarto and folio editions of Love's Labour's Lost in the naming of the characters. The confusion is particularly striking in IV. ii, where the names of Holofernes and Nathaniel are transposed through most of the scene. Throughout the play the Princess is often called 'Queen'; and the names of Armado, Holofernes, Nathaniel, Costard, and Dull are erratically supplanted in stage directions and speech headings by the titles, Braggart, Pedant, Curate, Clown, and Constable, while Moth is often referred to as Page or Boy. Some recent editors have attempted to discriminate on the evidence of these phenomena between the original and the revised portions of the play. Thus Mr. Dover Wilson argues that passages using the designations 'Braggart,' 'Pedant,' etc., belong to the revision of 1597, whereas passages that give the proper names 'Armado,' 'Holofernes,' etc., are part of the original play. But this leads to risky conclusions.

Love's Labour's Lost. The spelling of the title is that of the third Folio. The earlier Folios have Loues Labour's Lost. The first Quarto has on the title-page Loues labors lost, but as running-title Loues Labor's lost. 'Labour's' was evidently intended as a contraction of 'Labour is.' Meres, however, referred to the play as Loue labors lost, clearly regarding 'labors' as the nominative plural. Likewise the play is known in France as Les Peines de l'Amour Perdues and in Germany as Verlorene Liebesmüh.

I. i. 12. Navarre shall be the wonder of the world. The opening speech of the King shows the influence of Marlowe's versification in its special sonorousness, alliteration, and exhilaration. Compare with the present line Marlowe's Dido, l. 730: 'Lest I be made a wonder to the world.'

I. i. 14. Still and contemplative in living art. Quietly contemplating the art of perfect living. The line alludes to the common mediæval distinction between the contemplative and the active life. Mr. J. S. Reid (Iowa Philological Quarterly, July, 1922) suggests that 'living art' refers particularly to the Stoic term, ars vivendi, ethical (as distinguished from physical and logical) philosophy.

I. i. 62. feast. Theobald's emendation for the 'fast' of the early editions.

I. i. 67, 68. If study's gain be thus, and this be so, Study knows that which yet it doth not know. If the benefit of study consist only in the development of casuistry, then there is no such thing as knowledge: instead of discovering the true, study merely merges the true and the false.

I. i. 73. Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain. In which the final result of painful striving is only further pain.

I. i. 80-83. Study me how to please the eye indeed, By fixing it upon a fairer eye, Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed, And give him light that it was blinded by. 'Me' (l. 80) is the 'ethical dative'; 'Who' (l. 82) refers to the eye mentioned in l. 80 or to its owner; and 'it' (l. 83) is the object of 'by.' The passage may be paraphrased: Rather study how really to please your eye by fixing it upon that of a sweet-heart, whereupon your own eye will be dimmed; but the 'fairer eye' will be your sole attention and give light to you whom it has blinded.

I. i. 88-93. These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights, That give a name to every fixed star, Have no more profit of their shining nights Than those that walk and wot not what they are. Too much to know is to know nought but fame; And every godfather can give a name. The learned astronomers who give names to the stars have no more real control of them than have the ignorant. Encyclopedic knowledge is but parrot-like, no more essential than the bestowal of a name at the baptism of an infant.

I. i. 95. Proceeded. Almost certainly used in the technical sense of taking an academic degree. Berowne employs his own intellectual subtlety to discourage others from similarly training themselves.

I. i. 99. In reason nothing. Ber. Something, then, in rime. Shakespeare is very fond of playing on the alliterative phrase, rime and reason. Compare I. ii. 113.

I. i. 106. May's new-fangled shows. Since the rest of the passage is in alternate rime, it is assumed that the poet intended this line to end with a word riming with 'birth' (l. 104). Many editors have therefore substituted 'earth' (Theobald) or 'mirth' (Walker) for 'shows'; but neither seems natural, and it is quite likely that Shakespeare himself made the slip through inadvertence.

I. i. 109. Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate. Take an absurdly impractical course. The line is printed as in the Quarto. The Folio has the inferior version: 'That were to clymbe ore the house to vnlocke the gate.'

I. i. 114. Yet confident I'll keep what I have sworn. The second Folio reads 'swore,' which most modern editors introduce for the sake of rime.

I. ii. 58. the dancing horse. A famous performing horse named Morocco, first definitely mentioned in 1591 but apparently known as early as 1589. He was particularly accomplished in arithmetic.

I. ii. 83. Of what complexion? The four 'complexions' of the body were variously ascribed to the four elements (earth, air, water, fire) and to the four 'humours' (phlegm, choler, blood, melancholy).

I. ii. 95. she had a green wit. Perhaps Moth implies a pun on the green withes with which Samson was bound (Judges 16. 7): 'And Samson said unto her. If they bind me with seven green withs that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.'

I. ii. 115, 116. a ballet . . . of the King and the Beggar. The ballad of King Cophetua and the Beggar-maid is a favorite subject of allusion in Shakespeare and his contemporaries. Compare Armado's later mention of it in his letter (IV. i. 65 ff.). The extant version, printed in Percy's Reliques, appears to be post-Elizabethan.

I. ii. 167. the merry days of desolation. Perhaps Costard means 'dissipation.'

II. i. 41. Lord Perigort. Of course, an invented name. Périgord, near Bordeaux, was an important district during the Hundred Years' War between France and England. Shakespeare would have found it mentioned repeatedly in Holinshed in connection with the French campaigns of Henry VI's reign. Falconbridge, in the next line, appears to have been a name the poet liked. It is not French, but is applied to important characters both in King John and in Henry VI. See note on the latter play, I. i. 239, in this edition.

II. i. 62, 63. And much too little of that good I saw Is my report to his great worthiness. My testimony to his worthiness is summed up in saying that I had much too little opportunity to observe it.

II. i. 74. That aged ears play truant at his tales. The aged are tempted away from business to listen to his tales.

II. i. 130. Being but the one half of an entire sum. That is, the sum which Navarre's father had lent to France amounted to two hundred thousand crowns. See Appendix A, p. 130.

II. i. 184. let it blood. Alluding to the nearly inevitable practice of blood-letting in sickness.

II. i. 188. No point. A pun on the English word, 'point' (i.e. my eye is not sharp enough), and the French negative, ne . . . point. Maria makes the same poor joke in V. ii. 278.

II. i. 193. The heir of Alençon, Katharine her name. Both the Quarto and Folio texts here print 'Rosalin' instead of Katharine, and in line 208 'Katherin(e)' instead of Rosaline. This is one of the chief points used by Mr. Dover Wilson in an ingenious elaboration of a theory proposed by Mr. Charlton in 1917 (The Library, vol. viii, pp. 355-370); namely, that Shakespeare, in the first version of the play, intended the ladies to be masked and Boyet to mix their names when the lovers inquire of him, and that in the revised version he intended to omit this motive of confused identity because of its employment later in V. ii. Mr. Wilson thinks that an unintentional blending of the two versions can be seen in the text of the present scene. There are very strong reasons against these assumptions. The only basis for the idea that the three ladies (unlike the Princess) wear masks in this scene is Berowne's exclamation, 'Now fair befall your mask!' (l. 123), and the reply of Rosaline ('Katharine' in the Quarto). This is far from conclusive. On the other hand, the evident purpose of the scene is to allow each of the lords an opportunity of falling in love with a lady with whom, by hypothesis, he has previously had only the slightest acquaintance, but with whose peculiarities of face and coloring they are all shown to be perfectly familiar when they next appear (see Berowne's soliloquy, III. i. 205 ff., and the whole of IV. iii). It is impossible to believe that any author, skilled or unskilled, could have had the idea of frustrating so essential a piece of dramatic business by having the ladies unrecognizably masked and making them converse at cross purposes with the wrong gallants.

II. i. 201. God's blessing on your beard. Longaville means to imply that Boyet's flippant answers are inconsistent with his venerable beard. In pronunciation 'beard' and 'heard' rimed better than at present, the latter word still retaining the long vowel of its infinitive.

II. i. 212. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to you. Say 'farewell' to me, and I will say you are welcome (to depart).

II. i. 217. Kath. Two hot sheeps, marry. The Quarto assigns this speech to 'Lady Ka.' and the Folio to 'La. Ma.' Nearly all editors follow the latter, which, however, is probably a compositor's error occasioned by the fact that Maria is the speaker just above (l. 213). The three following lady's speeches (ll. 219, 220, 222), assigned in both the early editions simply to 'La.' or 'Lad.,' evidently belong to the same lady who speaks in l. 217. The Quarto's introduction of Katharine into the conversation is a dramatic gain.

II. i. 221. My lips are no common, though several they be. A quasi-legal pun. Several land, as opposed to common, was that in separate or private ownership. Katharine also calls her lips several as being more than one, or as being parted.

II. i. 244. margent. Alluding to the habit of printing explanatory notes on the margin (rather than the foot) of the page.

III. i. 3. Concolinel. Not satisfactorily explained. It has been interpreted as a corruption of the Irish words 'Can cailin gheal' (pronounced con colleen yal), i.e. 'sing, maiden fair.' Marshall suggests that it is French, 'Quand Colinelle,' which is at least as likely.

III. i. 9. brawl. French branle. Defined as the oldest of figure dances.

III. i. 13. canary. The canary was a very lively dance, allowing the improvisation of new steps.

III. i. 32. The hobby-horse is forgot. The 'hobby-horse,' a dancer made up to look like a horse, was a favorite figure in morris dances, and a special subject of Puritan invective. The line, 'O, the hobby-horse is forgot,' which Shakespeare uses again in Hamlet, III. ii. 145, has been supposed to come from a ballad.

III. i. 75. no salve in the mail, sir. That is, no quacksalver's remedy. Costard apprehends that Armado is calling for exotic (and hence suspect) remedies for the broken shin.

III. i. 86. is not l'envoy a salve? A pun on the Latin salve, used in salutations. The envoi, or concluding section, of a mediæval ballade ordinarily contained an address to the person to whom the poem was written.

III. i. 107. The boy hath sold him a bargain. This is usually explained as 'has got the better of him, made a fool of him,'—a sense which the idiom, to sell one a bargain, undoubtedly had. But I think the context shows that Costard, in the innocence of his rustic heart, really conjectures that l'envoy means goose, and that the goose mentioned in the incomprehensible speeches he has just listened to is a veritable bird, over the price of which Armado and Moth have been haggling.

III. i. 116. And he ended the market. There was a proverb: 'Three women and a goose make a market.'

III. i. 185. A very beadle to a humorous sigh. The beadle was an inferior kind of constable who whipped small offenders. See 2 Henry VI II. i. 135. 'Humorous' is here used in the sense of sentimental.

III. i. 190. This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid. The early editions, both quarto and folio, read 'This signior Iunios giant-dwarf, dan Cupid.' It may be better, instead of Hanmer's emendation as given in the text, to print with Hart: 'This signior junior,' i.e. Mr. Youngster.

IV. i. 22. O heresy in fair, fit for these days! The recent Cambridge editors, following a suggestion of Hart, see in this line and in lines 30-33 below 'a direct allusion to the conversion of Henry IV' to Romanism, July, 1593. The detached lines mentioned fit the historical situation well enough, but the Princess' speech as a whole does not. In his early plays Shakespeare is very fond of introducing passages of reflective moralizing such as this, generally without any suggestion of topical interest.

IV. i. 48. The thickest, and the tallest. As Marshall remarks, Costard's otherwise dull and uncivil joke gains point if one remembers that the ladies' parts were performed by boys. The wit apparently lies in the fact that the Princess was represented by the oldest and stoutest of this group, whose figure was outgrowing its suitability to feminine rôles.

IV. i. 56. Break up this capon. To break up a fowl was to carve it. Capon is used figuratively, like the French poulet, for a love-letter.

IV. i. 91. the Nemean lion. The lion slain by Hercules in performance of his first labor. Here and in Hamlet I. iv. 83 Shakespeare erroneously accents the first syllable. Hart notes that Golding's Ovid gave him a precedent for the pronunciation.

IV. i. 102. Monarcho. 'The monarch'; a crazy Italian who lived about the English court. He was subject to delusions of grandeur, and though he died about 1580, was still a familiar subject of allusion twenty years later.

IV. i. 112. she that bears the bow. Rosaline is punning on 'shooter' and 'suitor,' which were pronounced alike, and often quibblingly confused. In Boyet's speech, line 111, the early editions all print 'shooter' for 'suitor.' In Shakespeare's time, it should be remembered, firearms had not replaced the bow in the fashionable sport of deer-slaying. Several writers see a special application in the deer-shooting allusions of this and the next scene to Queen Elizabeth's well-known fondness for the cross-bow. Cf. Appendix A, p. 128, note 1.

IV. i. 115. if horns that year miscarry. If the crop of horns is not good. Boyet succumbs to the inevitable jest about cuckolds' horns, produced by unfaithful wives.

IV. i. 123. King Pepin of France. Charlemagne's father, a very ancient monarch.

IV. ii. 32. So were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school. The word 'patch' is used ambiguously. If Dull were seen in a school, (1) a patch (fool) would be put to study, and (2) a patch (disfigurement, disgrace) would be put on learning.

IV. ii. 34. Many can brook the weather that love not the wind. Apparently a proverbial saying, similar to 'There is no accounting for tastes,' or 'It takes many sorts of men to make a world.' To brook the weather means to put up with foul weather.

IV. ii. 37. Dictynna. This rare epithet of Diana is found in Golding's Ovid and in Tottel's Miscellany.

It made trouble for the early composers, who spell it 'Dictisima' and 'Dictima.'

IV. ii. 42. The allusion holds in the exchange. That is, the point of the jest is still seen when Holofernes recasts (in ll. 40, 41) the form in which Dull has given it (l. 36).

IV. ii. 82. vir sapit qui pauca loquitur. That man is wise who speaks little. The sentence is borrowed directly from Lyly's Latin grammar.

IV. ii. 96-98. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbra Ruminat . . . good old Mantuan. Holofernes quotes the opening words of the first eclogue of Mantuanus (Baptista Spagnuoli of Mantua, d. 1516), whose Latin poems were an elementary textbook in the schools of the day. The early editions read 'Facile' instead of 'Fauste,' which the recent Cambridge editors think an intentional misquotation. It is more probably a compositor's misreading of Shakespeare's manuscript.

IV. ii. 100, 101. Venetia, Venetia, Chi non te vede, non te pretia. Archaic Italian: 'Venice, Venice, he who has not seen thee cannot value thee.' The words are gibberish as they appear in the early editions. Theobald first explained them.

IV. ii. 103, 104. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Notes of the old musical scale in incorrect order. They should run: 'ut (later replaced by "do"), re, mi, fa, sol, la.'

IV. ii. 105. As Horace says in his —. What saying of Horace Holofernes has in mind the commentators have failed to discover.

IV. ii. 124. You find not the apostrophas. You pronounce syllables which should be omitted. Or perhaps, as Gollancz suggests, Holofernes means the reverse (diereses): You omit syllables which should be pronounced.

IV. ii. 126. numbers ratified. Metre sanctioned by convention.

IV. ii. 136. from one Monsieur Berowne, one of the strange queen's lords. A very confusing and probably corrupt passage. What Jaquenetta here says is directly opposed to her assertion (ll. 94, 95) that the letter was sent to her from Don Armado; and the designation of Berowne as 'one of the strange queen's lords' is equally absurd. The recent Cambridge editors add another to a great list of implausible explanations by theorizing that 'Berowne' is a compositor's error for 'Boyet' (written 'Bo' or 'Boy'), and that Jaquenetta understands Holofernes to mean by 'directed' imparted. They assume, therefore, that Boyet juggled the two letters.

IV. ii. 147. Trip and go. A common phrase, borrowed from the words of a popular morris dance song.

IV. ii. 169, 170. society—saith the text—is the happiness of life. Nathaniel's source for the remark has not been found. Perhaps he is inventing the 'text' like the 'certain Father' of line 155. There is a much quoted Latin hexameter line, repeated by Marlowe in Doctor Faustus, which may have been in Shakespeare's mind: 'Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris,' it is a comfort to the wretched to have companions in their pain.

IV. iii. 7. as mad as Ajax: it kills sheep. Alluding to the story that Ajax, disappointed of the award of Achilles' armor, went mad and attacked a flock of sheep, which he took for a hostile army.

IV. iii. 89. Stoop, I say. 'Stoop' is generally explained as equivalent to stooping, crooked; but there seems no justification for such a use. It is probably the verbal imperative, addressed sotto voce to Dumaine: Come off your stilts, abandon your exalted nonsense.

IV. iii. 180. With men like men. men of inconstancy. There is little to choose between many of the emendations of this line, which is clearly imperfect both in metre and in sense as printed in the early editions: 'With men like men of inconstancie.' The reading here accepted, which appears to be original with Craig, makes the line mean 'with ordinary, inconstant men.'

IV. iii. 212. sirs. Costard and Jaquenetta are addressed. Shakespeare uses 'sirs' of women alone in Antony and Cleopatra IV. xiii. 85.

IV. iii. 255. the school of night. Perhaps 'that which teaches night to be what it is: dark and sinister.' Most editors have preferred to adopt an emendation that originated with Theobald and Warburton: the scowl of night. The recent Cambridge editors lend their support to a fantastic notion of Mr. Acheson to the effect that 'the school of night' is a topical allusion to a society composed of Sir Walter Raleigh, the poet Chapman, Marlowe, etc., whom it is supposed Shakespeare was ridiculing in this play.

IV. iii. 256. And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well. An obscure line. The most obvious meaning is rather flat: 'And beauty's distinguishing mark (or perfection) well becomes the regions of light.'

IV. iii. 257. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light. Perhaps an allusion to 2 Corinthians 11. 14: 'And no marvel, for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light.' The idea recurs in Hamlet II. ii. 636, 637, and in Measure for Measure II. iv. 16, 17.

IV. iii. 299-304. The wording and argument of these lines are repeated in more extended form later in the speech. Compare especially lines 320-323 and 350-354. It is generally recognized that an earlier and a later, expanded and improved, version of the same speech have been accidentally amalgamated in the text which reached the printers. Mr. Dover Wilson argues that the opening lines of Berowne (289-295) were intended to begin both versions, and that they were followed in the earlier version by ll. 296-317 and in the later by ll. 318-365. See note on V. ii. 825-830.

IV. iii. 305. poisons up. Completely poisons. Theobald's emendation, 'prisons up,' is plausible and has been adopted by many editors.

IV. iii. 306. The nimble spirits in the arteries. The arteries were supposed to contain, not blood simply, but 'vital spirits.'

IV. iii. 336. When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd. The 'suspicious head of theft' may be interpreted either actively, i.e. the acutely watchful ears of a thief; or passively, i.e. the ears of one suspicious of being robbed. I think the former the more likely.

IV. iii. 364. For charity itself fulfils the law. Cf. Romans 13. 8: 'for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.'

IV. iii. 383. Sow'd cockle reap'd no corn. An elliptical and proverbial expression: if we plant weeds, we shall not reap corn; unless we make the proper preparations, we shall not gain the desired results.

V. i. 22. to speak 'dout,' fine, when he should say, 'doubt'. Holofernes belongs to the pedantic group which sought during the Renaissance to bring the spelling and pronunciation of English words as close as possible to the real or fancied Latin original. Thus the earlier doute was written and sounded doubt on the authority of Latin dubitum, and the earlier dette made into debt on the analogy of Latin debitum. The new, unhistorical spellings managed to establish themselves, but not the pronunciations upon which Holofernes and his class insisted.

V. i. 31. Priscian a little scratched. That is, your Latin is passable, but hackneyed. Priscian wrote, during the fifth century A.D., works which were long the standard textbooks on Latin grammar. Previous editors have assumed that 'scratched Priscian' must be equivalent to 'breaking Priscian's head,' i.e. speaking ungrammatical Latin. Hence Theobald misingeniously invented an error by changing Sir Nathaniel's correct sentence to 'Laus deo, bone intelligo,' and altered Holofernes' French (misprinted 'Bome boon for boon' in the original editions) into 'Bone?—bone for bene.' But the schoolmaster's meaning is that the sentence is Priscian (correct Latin), but scratched by overuse. He would never admit that a positive error in grammar 'will serve.'

V. i. 45. honorificabilitudinitatibus. Dative (or ablative) plural of a genuine mediæval Latin word used by Dante and other writers. It was famous as the longest of all words. It means something like 'the state of being capable of honors.'

V. i. 50. horn-book. A rudimentary implement of education. It consisted in a paper containing the letters of the alphabet, Lord's Prayer, etc., fastened to a piece of board and protected by a covering of transparent horn.

V. i. 73. circum circa. This is Theobald's rather over-ingenious emendation of 'vnum cita' in the early editions. Hart proposes 'unciatim,' inch by inch, and the late Cambridge editors nimis cito, all too quickly. Furness thinks unum cita a meaningless bit of school-boy slang.

V. i. 82. ad dunghill. This, as Holofernes suspects, is a perversion of ad unguem, probably current in the grammar-schools.

V. i. 88, 89. the charge-house on the top of the mountain. Charge-house, defined as boarding-school in the Oxford Dictionary, is not otherwise exemplified. The mention of the top of the mountain has been suspected of containing some topical reference. Critics who wish to identify Holofernes with John Florio take mountain as suggesting Montaigne, whose essays Florio translated. The date of Florio's Montaigne, 1603, seems sufficient to discredit this theory.

V. i. 128. the Nine Worthies. They were variously listed, the most common enumeration being:—Three pagans (Hector, Alexander, and Cæsar); three Jews (Joshua, David, and Judas Maccabæus); and three Christians (King Arthur, Charlemagne, and Godfrey of Bouillon). Hercules and Pompey seem to have been first included by Shakespeare.

V. i. 145. Hercules in minority. The myth related that the infant Hercules' first exploit was to strangle two serpents which Juno had sent to destroy him. Hart quotes a line from Golding's Ovid (Metamorphoses ix. 79, 80), which may have stuck in the poet's memory: 'It is my Cradle game To vanquish Snakes.'

V. ii. 13. You'll ne'er be friends with him: a' kill'd your sister. M. Abel Lefranc (Sous le Masque de 'William Shakespeare,' 1919, ii. p. 73-80) identifies this sister of Katharine with Hélène de Tournon, an attendant of Marguerite de Valois, Queen of Navarre, who actually died of love in 1577. But the incident is so similar to Viola's famous story of her sister in Twelfth Night that it seems more likely to have come from something in the personal experience of the poet than from anything in the source material of Love's Labour's Lost.

V. ii. 26. I weigh not you. A pun, as the next line shows, on two idioms: (1) 'I do not equal you in weight,' and (2) 'I don't care about you.'

V. ii. 40. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise. Furness explains 'The resemblance was great in the dark colour of the letters, but not at all in the substance of the praise.'

V. ii. 42. Fair as a text B in a copy-book. A large ornamental capital in the old 'Gothic' hand: a 'black-letter.'

V. ii. 43. 'Ware pencils, ho! If we come to painting each other's portraits, take care.

V. ii. 44. red dominical. The red letter used in old almanacs to mark the Sundays of the year. The mediæval name for Sunday was 'dies dominica.'

V. ii. 51. A huge translation of hypocrisy. Katharine affects to think Dumaine's verses imitated from foreign rimers.

V. ii. 61. in by the week. Permanently caught.

V. ii. 65. hests. The only argument for this word (which editors unanimously admit to be decisive) is the requirement of a rime for 'jests' in the next line. The First Quarto and First Folio read 'deuice,' for which the Second Folio substituted 'behests.' So in line 74 wantonness is a Second Folio emendation of 'wantons be.'

V. ii. 67. So perttaunt-like would I o'ersway his state. Not very satisfactorily explained. The numerous conjectural emendations—pedant-like, portent-like, pendant-like, planet-like, etc.—are unconvincing. Marshall argues that perttaunt-like may be the term 'pur tant' (for so much) used in the card game of Post and Pair, quoting a line from John Davies' Wittes Pilgrimage (1610?): 'Then to Pur Tant hee's in subjection.' (Cf. Works of John Davies of Hereford, ed. Grosart, vol. ii. p. 38.)

V. ii. 121. Like Muscovites or Russians. Russian costumes were not uncommon in English courtly masquerades. Sir Sidney Lee suggests a particular allusion to a visit of Russian nobles to Elizabeth's court in 1583.

V. ii. 243. What! was your vizard made without a tongue? Mr. W. J. Lawrence explains (Times Lit. Suppl., June 7, 1923) that Elizabethan masks were kept in place by a tongue held between the wearer's teeth.

V. ii. 248. 'Veal,' quoth the Dutchman. 'Veal' may be the Dutchman's pronunciation of 'well,' or the German viel (much), or a pun on 'veil' in the sense of mask. The editors' efforts to evolve wit and sense out of this dialogue are all far-fetched. Katharine is evidently punning on Longaville's name in the words 'long' (l. 245) and 'veal.'

V. ii. 250. Let's part the word. The recent Cambridge editors explain: 'half the word "calf" is "ca" which are the first two letters of Catharine, and "half" means "wife."' '

V. ii. 280. Qualm, perhaps. Pronounced 'calm'; hence the pun. The same jest occurs in 2 Henry IV II. iv. 39-41.

V. ii. 282. statute-caps. An act of Parliament in 1571 required all ordinary citizens to wear woollen caps on Sundays and holidays. Hart quotes a still more apposite regulation for the apparel of London apprentices (in 1582), forbidding them at any time to wear within the city any head covering except a woollen cap. The object was to encourage the wool trade. It is worth noting that Shakespeare's uncle incurred a fine in 1583 for refusing to wear a cloth cap on Sundays and holidays.

V. ii. 339. Till this man show'd thee. Theobald first read 'man' for the 'madman' of the early editions, which spoils the scansion of the line and certainly does not improve the sense. A plausible explanation of the intrusion of the superfluous 'mad—' is that the compositor's eye caught the first syllable of 'madam' in the next line.

V. ii. 406. like a blind harper's song. Harping was proverbially the resource of the blind.

V. ii. 420. 'Lord have mercy on us.' The words put up on plague-stricken houses.

V. ii. 424. the Lord's tokens. Spots on the body, marking the plague. Berowne jestingly so calls the lords' tokens, i.e. the gifts of his three associates to the ladies who are wearing them. There is perhaps in these plague mentions a suggestion of the great London plague of 1592-1593, but Mr. Charlton argues that such jesting would not be natural while the actual plague was raging.

V. ii. 491. You cannot beg us. This slangy way of saying, 'We are no idiots,' seems to have arisen from the practice of suing for the guardianship of wealthy incompetents.

V. ii. 517, 518. Where zeal strives to content, and the contents Dies in the zeal of that which it presents. Where the unintelligent zeal of the actors strives to content the audience, and the gist (contents) of the entertainment is destroyed by this very zeal in performance.

V. ii. 545. Abate throw at novum. Alluding to a game called novem quinque, in which the two principal throws were nine and five. The Cambridge editors explain the words as 'referring to the presentation of nine worthies by five players.'

V. ii. 549. With libbard's head on knee. Theobald explained this by quoting Cotgrave's definition of the French word masquine: 'The representation of a lion's head, etc., upon the elbow or knee of some old-fashioned garments.'

V. ii. 566. it stands too right. The point seems to be that Alexander's head sat crookedly on his shoulders. Shakespeare can have got this fact from North's Plutarch. Boyet may, however, simply mean that Nathaniel's nose is not aquiline enough for that of a worthy.

V. ii. 576. You will be scraped out of the painted cloth for this. That is, you will lose your place as one of the worthies. Painted cloths were a more humble substitute for tapestry in wall-coverings, and the nine worthies were a common subject of their decoration.

V. ii. 577. your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close-stool. Theobald illustrated this Rabelaisian witticism very neatly by quoting the description of Alexander's arms in Gerard Leigh's Accidence of Armory, 1591: 'a lion or [of gold color] seiante [sitting] in a chair, holding a battle-axe argent.'

V. ii. 601. A kissing traitor. Alluding to the kiss of Judas Iscariot. Berowne gets the hint for this gibe from Dumaine's clipt in the line above. Dumaine uses the word in the sense of abbreviated, and Berowne seizes upon another sense, from 'clip,' to embrace.

V. ii. 607. Judas was hanged on an elder. An old belief. Sir John Mandeville reported that the tree was still standing.

V. ii. 619. worn in the cap of a toothdrawer. The brooch in the toothdrawer's cap appears to have been a distinguishing mark of his costume. Halliwell quoted a passage from the works of John Taylor, the Water-Poet (1630):—'In Queen Elizabeth's days there was a fellow that wore a brooch in his hat like a toothdrawer.' One of the costume sketches made by Inigo Jones for a mask at James I's court represents a toothdrawer wearing a very high hat with a brooch in the left side. (See publications of the (Old) Shakespeare Society, vol. 39, 1848.)

V. ii. 692. More Ates. Ate was goddess of discord. She is introduced at the opening of Peele's Arraignment of Paris and again in the fourth book of the Fairy Queen.

V. ii. 731, 732. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion. 'To see day at a little hole' was a proverbial saying.

V. ii. 748, 749. The extreme parts of time extremely forms All causes to the purpose of his speed. The closing moments of a period force concentration upon the matter in hand, or subordinate everything else to the necessity of making the most of time.

'Forms' is the old northern English plural, frequent in Shakespeare. Cf. 'runs' in line 310.

V. ii. 762. And by these badges understand the king. Badges are distinguishing marks. Berowne goes on to explain what they are; namely, the various evidences of the deep sincerity of the wooers' love.

V. ii. 824. Hence ever then. The Folio reading. The Quarto has 'Hence herrite then,' which Professor Pollard ingeniously explains as 'Hence hermit then.'

V. ii. 825-830. These six lines evidently come from the earlier version of the play. The expanded version is found in ll. 845-877. See note on IV. iii. 299-304. Mr. Dover Wilson suggests that ll. 878, 879 originally followed 830, and that the whole passage 831-877 was interpolated in the revision, Dumaine being then given in l. 831 the line of Berowne (825) which the poet intended to delete along with Rosaline's original answer (826-830).

V. ii. 844. The liker you; few taller are so young. Time in being long is the more like Longaville, who is 'long' both by name and by being tall for his age.

V. ii. 899. This side is Hiems, Winter; this Ver, the Spring. The poetical argument between winter and spring was a famous subject of the mediæval debate. One version, entitled Conflictus Hiemis et Veris, is ascribed to the celebrated Alcuin (A.D. 735-804).

APPENDIX A

SOURCES OF THE PLAY

The central idea of Love's Labour's Lost—that a scholarly prince binds himself and his chosen associates to a quasi-monastic scheme of life, which is immediately shattered by the intrusion of amorous sentiment¹—would seem much too obvious to be the original invention of Shakespeare; yet no earlier work, either of fiction or of history, has been discovered which can reasonably be regarded as a source of the play, and modern scholarship can only repeat, as regards the main plot, the confession of the first great detector of Shakespearean sources, Langbaine (1691): 'Loves Labour Lost (sic), a Comedy: the Story of which I can give no Account of.' Even more, then, than A Midsummer-Night's Dream and The Tempest, Love's Labour's Lost stands out as an example of Shakespeare's rare practice of inventing rather than adapting a dramatic plot.

Like the main plot, the constituent elements which make up the play owe little, apparently, to Shakespeare's reading. They seem rather to be drawn from two non-literary sources upon which the play depends in nearly equal degree. The less conspicuous half of it—involving the characters of Costard, Jaquenetta, Dull, Holofernes, and Nathaniel, and the show of the Nine Worthies—is a heightened study of English country types, evidently founded upon personal observation. The other half, dealing with the French lords and ladies, seems based—in so far as it has a basis outside the poet's imagination—upon the political talk of London in the period about 1589.¹ In 1880 (Sir) Sidney Lee pointed out three features of this part of the play which bear an analogy to contemporary history:

(1) The King of Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine have names which are identical or practically so with those of four conspicuous leaders in the French civil war of 1589-1593: Henri IV (Henry of Navarre); his two generals, Marshal Biron and the Duke of Longueville; and his great opponent, the Duke du Maine, or de Mayenne, brother to the Duke of Guise.²

(2) In 1586 Catherine de Medici, Queen-Mother of France, conducted a diplomatic conference with Henry of Navarre at St.-Bris, at which the Queen attempted to influence the course of negotiations by means of a band of gay and charming ladies in waiting.³

¹ Several recent writers see English topical references in the Princess of France's visit to Navarre. Thus Mr. Arthur Acheson (Shakespeare's Lost Years in London, 1920, p. 119, 165 ff.) conjectures that Love's Labour's Lost 'was written late in 1591, or early in 1592, as a reflection of the Queen's progress [August, 1591] to Cowdray House, the home of the Earl of Southampton's maternal grandfather, Viscount Montague, and that the shooting of deer by the Princess and her ladies fancifully records phases of the entertainments arranged for the Queen during her visit.' Cf. note on IV. i. 112.

² Dumaine is prominent in Marlowe's Massacre at Paris as an enemy of Navarre. It is very likely, as Hart and Charlton diffidently suggest, that Shakespeare confused him with Marshal d'Aumont, who, though originally anti-Huguenot, was one of the first to recognize Navarre after Henri III's death (1589) and shared with him in the victory at Ivry (1590). Longueville gained a great victory for the Huguenots at Senlis in 1589. Lee's further assumption that Moth is named after La Motte, a French ambassador at Elizabeth's court in earlier days, lacks probability.

³ Lefranc would substitute for the meeting at St.-Bris an earlier meeting of Catherine and Navarre at Nérac in 1580.

(3) In 1582-1583 an official deputation of Muscovites was at Queen Elizabeth's court to treat concerning the marriage of the Czar Ivan to a kinswoman of the English Queen. They made themselves ridiculous and became the butt of a practical joke. (See V. ii. 121 and note.)

The pertinence of these parallels is hardly questionable, but the flippancy and vagueness with which Shakespeare utilizes the historical incidents certainly suggest that his knowledge comes from current talk rather than from definite printed accounts. The dramatist, of course, was not purporting to write contemporary history, as Marlowe was when he produced his Massacre at Paris. Doubtless Shakespeare first devised his fiction of Navarre and France at a period when it was possible to weave into it recent names and incidents still too vague in their connotation for English auditors to jar against the playful spirit of the comedy.¹ He seems to have conceived of his Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine as living in some pleasant remote time, and it is entirely possible that the real nucleus of the Navarre-France portion of the story is to be found in some such passage as that of Monstrelet's history,² cited by Hunter in 1845, the relevancy of which Lee and nearly all subsequent critics have denied. Monstrelet writes as follows: 'At this same season [ca. 1403], Charles king of Navarre came to Paris to wait on the king. He negotiated so successfully with the king and his privy council, that he obtained a gift of the castle of Nemours, with some of its dependent castlewicks, which territory was made

² Monstrelet, who died in 1453, continued the Chronicles of Froissart from the year 1400. The passage quoted comes near the commencement of his work (bk. i, ch. 17). A number of French editions were available in Shakespeare's time, but there appears to have been no translation into English before that of Thomas Johnes in 1809.

a duchy. He instantly did homage for it, and at the same time surrendered to the king the castle of Cherbourg, the county of Évreux, and all other lordships he possessed within the kingdom of France, renouncing all claim or profit in them to the king and his successors, on consideration that with this duchy of Nemours the king of France engaged to pay him two hundred thousand gold crowns of the coin of the king our lord.' In this rather complicated transaction Shakespeare may have found the suggestion for the still more complex business of the play, in which likewise a deceased King Charles (cf. II. i. 162) of Navarre and a total sum of two hundred thousand crowns (cf. II. i. 128-134) are involved.¹

The French and English halves of the play are joined together by the characters of Armado and his page Moth, who are neither French nor convincingly English. In these two figures literary precedent is more evident than elsewhere, and it is clearly John Lyly whom Shakespeare is following. Compare the talk of Armado and Moth in II. i with the following scene between a braggart and his page in Lyly's Endimion.²

'Sir Tophas. Epi, loue hath iustled my libertie from the wall, and taken the vpper hand of my reason.

Epiton. Let mee then trippe vp the heeles of your affection, and thrust your goodwill into the gutter.

Sir. To. No, Epi, Loue is a Lorde of misrule, and keepeth Christmas in my corps.

Epi. No doubt there is good cheere: what dishes of delight doth his Lordshippe feast you withal?

¹ Professor Iefranc (Sous le Masque de 'William Shakespeare') makes an important addition by showing that discussions concerning Navarre's holdings in the province of Aquitaine were rife between him and the King of France about 1580.

² Act V, sc. ii. The date of Endimion is probably 1586.

Sir To. First, with a great platter of plum-porridge of pleasure, wherein is stued the mutton of mistrust.

Epi. Excellent loue lappe.

Sir To. Then commeth a Pye of patience, a Henne of honnie, a Goose of gall, a Capon of care, and many other Viandes, some sweete and some sowre; which proueth loue to bee, as it was saide of in olde yeeres, Dulce venenum.

Epi. A braue banquet.

Sir To. But, Epi, I praye thee feele on my chinne, some thing prycketh mee. What dost thou feele or see?

Epi. There are three or foure little haire.

Sir To. I pray thee call it my bearde. Howe shall I bee troubled when this younge springe shall growe to a great wood!

Epi. O, sir, your chinne is but a quyller yet, you will be most maiesticall when it is full fledge. But I maruell that you loue Dipsas, that old Crone,' etc.

The chief literary influence in Love's Labour's Lost is certainly Lyly's, poor though the latter's work seems by contrast. Shakespeare at once differentiates himself from the artificial prose comedy of Lyly by his vindication of common sense against affectation and by his deep interest in sonorous verse effects. It is not unlikely that the play is also related superficially to Marlowe's Massacre at Paris (written toward the end of 1589), in which the historical Navarre and Dumaine are both introduced, and which opens with Navarre's marriage to the Princess of France.¹

APPENDIX B

SHAKESPEARE'S ORIGINAL TEXT AND HIS REVISION

The date of composition of Shakespeare's original (lost) version of Love's Labour's Lost and its relation to the text of 1598, corrected and augmented for performance at court, have been the subject of long discussion, to which daring contributions have been made within the last half-dozen years. The conjectured dates of original composition range, according to Dr. Furness' table, from 1588 or earlier till after 1596. Metrical evidence, persisting even in the augmented text, supports the assumption of Furnivall, Dowden, and Sir Sidney Lee that Love's Labour's Lost is the earliest of all Shakespeare's plays. Hart (Arden ed., x-xvii) finds other internal evidence pointing 'to 1590 for the date of the earliest form of the play.' Such till recently has been the generally accepted opinion.

In the Modern Language Review (July, October, 1918) Mr. H. B. Charlton published a monograph on 'The Date of Love's Labour's Lost,' in which he argues for the latter part of 1592 as the time of first composition and assumes only a slight revision immediately previous to the performance of 1597-8. Subsequent writers have apparently inclined to accept Mr. Charlton's rather iconoclastic conclusions. Professor J. Q. Adams¹ agrees that '1592 is the earliest date that can possibly be assigned to the play,' and conjectures that it was composed during the inhibition of acting from June till December of that year. The recent Cambridge editors (1923) go farther and, joining Mr.

Charlton's deductions to some fancied evidences in the play of hostility to Sir Walter Raleigh and his associates, arrive at 1593 for the year of writing: 'We give it as our belief, and no more, that Love's Labour's Lost was written in 1593 for a private performance in the house of some grandee who had opposed Raleigh and Raleigh's "men"—possibly the Earl of Southampton's.'

I venture to suggest briefly some reasons for thinking that the probability of an early version of Love's Labour's Lost, written not later than 1590 and standing very near the beginning of Shakespeare's dramatic work, remains unimpaired.¹ Mr. Charlton agrees that Shakespeare's use of topical names (Navarre, Berowne, Longaville, Dumaine) is a concession to English interest in contemporary events in France. This interest, he maintains, really began with the sending of an expeditionary force to the aid of Henry of Navarre in July, 1591, while 'the summer and autumn of 1592 marked the highest level of English public interest in the French wars.'² It seems clear, on the other hand, that if Shakespeare gave his sentimental students these topical names out of consideration for public interest in their namesakes, he could only have done so before the public, or he himself, had yet

¹ I do not deal with the special allusions which Mr. Charlton finds in individual passages of the play to books and events of the period 1590-1592. In most cases the dates implied do not seem to me decisive, and Mr. Charlton's unsupported hypothesis that practically everything in the play was in it from the beginning removes the matter from the field of argument.

² Dr. Furnivall refers to Stow's statement that in September, 1589, 'the citizens of London furnished a thousand men to be sent over into France, to the aiding of Henry, late King of Navarre, then challenging the crown of France.' Mr. Charlton rather perversely, as it seems to me, refuses to believe that there can have been sufficient public interest at this date.

acquired any clear notion of the character and achievements of the latter. To call the King of Navarre Ferdinand rather than Henry and ignore his pretensions to the French crown, to say nothing (virtually) of the military fame of the four gentlemen and associate Dumaine in friendship with the rest, or alternatively, to confuse Dumaine with d'Aumont,¹ would have affronted common intelligence if attempted very long after the death of Henri III (August 2, 1589) had brought them all upon the centre of the political stage. I take it that the period between Henri III's assassination and the battle of Ivry (March 14, 1590) was the latest at which an English dramatist could have thought of thus irrelevantly employing the names of the leading French generals for the heroes of a comedy of love and the simple life.

Mr. Charlton's assumption that the revision of the play was slight is contradicted by the large amount of discrepancy between mature and immature work, and also by the curious and cumbrous structure of the existing text, in which the first three acts together are only half the length of the last two and not as long as the colossal second scene of Act V.

The first three acts doubtless represent the scale upon which the comedy was originally written. The earliest critic who attempted to distinguish closely between the two texts (of ca. 1590 and ca. 1597) appears to have been Spedding, whose apportionment, made in 1839, is quoted by Dr. Furnivall.² In a paper on 'The Original Version of Love's Labour's Lost' (1918) Professor H. D. Gray has attempted with interesting results to discover the scope of the original play, basing his arguments upon evidences of organic unity and 'youthful love of symmetry,' as well as upon style. In the recent Cambridge edition Mr. Dover Wilson has made a similar attempt,¹ independently and by means of totally different criteria—chiefly the bibliographical phenomena of the Quarto and Folio texts. The various results are of course contradictory in many details, but the investigators all agree in assigning a large preponderance of the first three acts to the original version and the larger part of the last two to the revision.

APPENDIX C

THE HISTORY OF THE PLAY

The known history of Love's Labour's Lost begins with the evidence found on the title-page of the earliest edition,¹ the Quarto of 1598. This reads: 'A Pleasant Conceited Comedie Called, Loues labors lost. As it vvas presented before her Highnes this last Christmas. Newly corrected and augmented By W. Shakespere.' Her Highness was Queen Elizabeth and the Christmas performance alluded to probably took place during the season of December, 1597-January, 1598.² The statement that the play had been newly corrected and augmented is substantiated beyond all question by the text itself, particularly in the fourth and fifth acts.³

Love's Labour's Lost is the earliest of Shakespeare's plays concerning which we have notice of a special performance at court and probably also the earliest to name Shakespeare as author on the printed title-page. It is mentioned in Meres' Palladis Tamia (1598),

¹ Mr. Pollard has argued that this Quarto was probably preceded by a piratical earlier edition of which no trace remains. The evidence is purely bibliographical and circumstantial, but carries weight.

² The Elizabethan year began with March 25. Hence if the Quarto was printed between January 1 and March 24, 'this last Christmas' would be Christmas, 1598, by our reckoning. Halliwell-Phillipps (Furness, p. 336) suggested a connection of the performance of the play with a recorded payment in December, 1597, 'for altering and making readie of soundrie chambers at Whitehall against Christmas, and for the plaies, and for making readie in the hall for her Maiestie.' Shakespeare's company acted at court on December 26 of both years, 1597 and 1598, and also on the following January 1 (1598 and 1599).

³ See notes on IV. iii. 299-304 and V. ii. 825-830.

third in the list of six comedies ascribed to the poet, and again in the same year in Robert Tofte's Alba, where the allusion is casual and more complimentary to the actors than to the dramatist:

'Loues Labor Lost, I once did see a Play
Ycleped so, so called to my paine,
Which I to heare to my small Ioy did stay,
Giuing attendance on my froward Dame,
My misgiuing minde presaging to me Ill,
Yet was I drawne to see it gainst my Will.

'This Play no Play, but Plague was vnto me,
For there I lost the Loue I liked most:
And what to others seemde a Iest to be,
I that in earnest found vnto my cost:
To euery one (saue me) twas Comicall,
Whilst Tragick like to me it did befall.

'Each Actor plaid in cunning wise his part,
But chiefly Those entrapt in Cupids snare:
Yet all was fained, twas not from the hart,
They seemde to grieue, but yet they felt no care:
Twas I that Griefe (indeed) did beare in brest,
The others did but make a show in Iest.'

The sonnets of Berowne (IV. ii. 110-123) and Longaville (IV. iii. 60-73) and Dumaine's 'ode' (IV. iii. 101-120) were reprinted by William Jaggard in 1599 in the pirated volume called The Passionate Pilgrim, and Dumaine's poem was also included in the anthology, England's Helicon, in 1600. Later William Drummond of Hawthornden lists the comedy as one of the 'Bookes red be me, anno 1606,' when Drummond was staying in London. Property rights in the published play are affirmed when, on January 22, 1606/7, Burby, the publisher of the 1598 Quarto (who seems not to have entered it himself), transferred Love's Labour's Lost, along with Romeo and Juliet and The Taming of a Shrew to Nicholas Linge. Less than a year later Linge surrendered all three plays (November 19, 1607) to John Smethwick, who was later one of the partners in the Folio Shakespeare.

Though probably never notably popular, Love's Labour's Lost showed unusual staying powers during the Shakespearean era. First produced at the opening of the poet's career, it was rewritten, as we have seen, in 1597-8 for the particular amusement of Queen Elizabeth. A little over a year after her death it was again selected for court performance in order to divert her successor, Anne of Denmark (Queen of James I), as is witnessed by the following very interesting letter from Sir Walter Cope to Viscount Cranborne (i.e. Sir Robert Cecil, later Lord Salisbury):

'Sir,—I haue sent and bene all thys morning huntynge for players Juglers & Such kinde of Creaturs, but fynde them harde to fynde; wherefore leauing notes for them to seek me, Burbage ys come, and sayes there is no new playe that the quene hath not seene, but they haue reuyued an olde one, cawled Loues Labore Lost, which for wytt & mirthe he sayes will please her exceedingly. And thys ys appointed to be playd to morrowe night at my Lord of Sowthamptons, unless yow send a wrytt to remove the corpus cum causa to your howse in Strande. Burbage ys my messenger ready attending your pleasure.' This is dated '1604,' and the performance referred to is fixed by Mr. Chambers as between January 8 and January 15, 1604/5.¹ The audit office accounts for 1604-5 record the acting 'By his Majesty's players' of 'A play of Loues Labours Lost' between New Year's Day and Twelfth Day (January 6).

A certain degree of continued popularity is indicated by the publication of another Quarto edition of

Love's Labour's Lost in 1631, during the period, that is, between the appearance of the first and second Folio editions of Shakespeare, when relatively few of his plays were being called for in separate form. The statement on the title-page of this Quarto, 'As it was acted by his Majesty's Servants at the Blackfriars and the Globe,' if correct, proves that revivals must have occurred after 1608-9, when Shakespeare's company first began to use the Blackfriars' Theatre.

Later the play fell into total obscurity for over a century. No performances or adaptations are known during the period of the Restoration or the first half of the eighteenth century. Dryden in 1672¹ groups Love's Labour's Lost with The Winter's Tale and Measure for Measure as examples of the worst of Shakespeare's plays, 'which were either grounded on impossibilities, or at least so meanly written, that the comedy neither caused your mirth, nor the serious part your concernment.' Jeremy Collier (1699) says briefly of it that 'the poet plays the fool egregiously, for the whole play is a very silly one'; and Gildon (1710) brands it as 'one of the worst of Shakespear's Plays, nay, I think I may say, the very worst.'

When As You Like It was revived in 1740, the cuckoo song from the close of Love's Labour's Lost was interpolated into the acting version of the other play, where it long continued to be used.² This would seem to be the only part of Love's Labour's Lost that ever appeared on the eighteenth-century stage. The first known adaptation of our play was printed in 1762 with the title: 'The Students. A Comedy Altered from Shakespeare's Love's Labours Lost, and Adapted to the Stage.' Though equipped with elaborate prologue and epilogue in heroic couplets, there is no evidence that this work ever reached the stage for which it had been 'adapted.' Only about 800 lines of the original play are retained;¹ the characters of Holofernes and Nathaniel are omitted entirely, and the mask of Muscovites and show of Nine Worthies are replaced by a 'comic dance' in dumb-show. The alterations of Shakespeare's main plot are rather remarkable. Berowne puts on a coat intended for Costard, and having thus easily rendered himself irre recognizable, carries messages between the lords and ladies. In this way he secures information enough about the real sentiments of them all to dominate the situation and force an immediate happy ending instead of the year's postponement proposed by the Princess. His closing words express the author's high sense of his improvement upon the original:

'Our wooing now doth end like an old play;
Jack hath his Jill; these ladies' courtesie
Hath nobly made our sport a Comedy.'

Another apparently unacted revision of Love's Labour's Lost, likewise anonymous, is preserved in a single copy at the British Museum. It dates from about the year 1800. This version also eliminates Holofernes and Nathaniel and concludes with the ladies' consent to immediate matrimony, brought about in a manner quite different from that employed in The Students. The characters of Costard and Jaquenetta (Jaqueline) are much romanticized, and they too are made happy at the end. Armado is presented as a demi-villain, and eavesdropping is employed even more copiously than in the original play.

On September 30, 1839, the first recorded performance of Love's Labour's Lost since Shakespearean times was given at Covent Garden. Madame Vestris played Rosaline; Harley, Armado; and Anderson, Berowne. The piece was performed nine times and three slightly differing versions of the acting text were published. In 1857 Samuel Phelps presented the play at the Sadler's Wells Theatre, Phelps himself taking the part of Armado. In 1885 and again in 1907 it was produced at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, as the Shakespeare Birthday play (April 23), Mr. F. R. Benson playing Berowne on the latter occasion. The English Drama Society gave it in Bloomsbury Hall, April 24, 1906. Other productions are recorded by the companies of Charles Fry, Ben Greet, and Florence Glossop-Harris. An acting version, 'adapted by Elsie Fogerty for Girls' Schools,' was published in 1912. Recently, under the management of Miss Lillian Baylis, Love's Labour's Lost has appeared frequently in the repertory of the Royal Victoria Hall ('Old Vic.') in London; e.g. in the spring of 1918 and during the season that began September 22, 1923. The most recent production was that given by the Oxford University Dramatic Society in Wadham College garden, June 21, 1924. The enthusiastic tone of the critics of these late performances¹ shows that the play is now gaining in the esteem of audiences as during the past generation it has gained in the favor of critics and general readers.

The most important American productions of Love's Labour's Lost were those arranged by Augustin Daly in New York, in 1874 and again in 1891. The German Shakespeare scholar, Rudolph Genée, brought out in 1887 a considerably altered version in three acts for the German stage. In recent times this has usually been supplanted by translations which adhere more closely to the original.

¹ See reviews, for example, in the Manchester Guardian, September 28, 1923, and June 27, 1924.

APPENDIX D

THE TEXT OF THE PRESENT EDITION

The text of the present volume is based, by permission of the Oxford University Press, upon that of the Oxford Shakespeare, edited by the late W. J. Craig, and the line-numbering of that edition, employed in Onions' Shakespeare Glossary and other works of reference, has been retained. Craig's text has been carefully collated with the two primary authorities, the 1598 Quarto and the text of Love's Labour's Lost in the Folio of 1623, and the following changes have been made:

1. The stage directions of the two original editions have been restored. They vary only in a few unimportant details. Necessary words and directions, omitted by both Quarto and Folio, are supplied within square brackets.

2. Punctuation and spelling have been normalized to accord with modern English practice; e.g. Anthony, godlike, malcontents, nickname, villainy (instead of Antony, god-like, malecontents, nick-name, villany). Legitimate Shakespearcan words have been retained; e.g. ballet, murtherer, strooken, vizard (instead of ballad, murderer, strucken, visor).

3. The following changes of text have been introduced, nearly always in conformity with Quarto and Folio authority (indicated by Q and F respectively). Where the two differ, the Quarto has usually been preferred. Changes of punctuation are noted only when they materially affect the sense. The readings of the present edition precede the colon, while Craig's readings follow it;

SUGGESTIONS FOR COLLATERAL READING

Walter Pater: Essay on Love's Labour's Lost in Appreciations (1889), pp. 167-175. (Written in 1878.)

S. L. Lee: 'A New Study of Love's Labour's Lost.' Gentleman's Magazine, Oct., 1880, vol. 249, pp. 447-458.

Andrew Lang: 'The Comedies of Shakespeare, with Illustrations by E. A. Abbey and Comment by Andrew Lang.' X Love's Labour's Lost. Harper's Magazine, May, 1893, pp. 900-913.

J. M. Robertson: Shakespeare and Chapman. London, 1917, pp. 107-120. (A superior example of 'heretical' criticism. Holofernes is explained as a satire on Chapman.)

H. D. Gray: The Original Version of 'Love's Labour's Lost,' with a Conjecture as to 'Love's Labour's Won.' Stanford University Publications, 1918. (Well-informed but over-imaginative.)

H. B. Charlton: The Date of 'Love's Labour's Lost.' Modern Language Review, July, October, 1918, vol. xiii, pp. 257-266, 387-400. (See discussion, Appendix B, p. 132 ff.)

Abel Lefranc: Sous le Masque de 'William Shakespeare.' Paris, 1919. Chap. vii, vol. ii, pp. 17-103. (The book argues that William Stanley, Earl of Derby, wrote Shakespeare. The chapter cited contains interesting data illustrative of Love's Labour's Lost.)

Austin K. Gray: The Secret of 'Love's Labour's Lost.' Publ. Mod. Lang. Assoc., September, 1924, vol. xxxix, pp. 581-611. (An attempt to explain the play in the light of Lord Southampton's nugatory betrothal to Elizabeth Vere, 1591.)

The Furness Variorum edition of Love's Labour's Lost, Philadelphia, 1904, is excellent even beyond the average of its series. That in the Arden series, edited by H. C. Hart, 1906 (2d ed., 1913), contains much valuable illustrative material (the critical conclusions in the Introduction are often exceptionable). The edition of Sir A. Quiller-Couch and Mr. J. Dover Wilson for the Cambridge University Press (1923) exploits the modern methods of bibliographical annotation, often with over-imaginative results.
